THE ATLANTIC CUP.

FAIR COPY'S SECOND SUCCESS.

PATH OF PEACE SCORES.

POPULAR LIVERPOOL WIN.

Lord Glanely's filly, Path of Peace, [illegible] a popular victory in the Summer [illegible] at Liverpool yesterday, writes "Hot[illegible]" the "Daily Telegraph" racing correspondent.

[illegible] the handicap she had an excellent [illegible] and actually Michael Beary put [illegible] overweight to ride the daughter [illegible]alot. She had half a length to [illegible] from the fast finishing Black [illegible] passing the post. Path of Peace [illegible] to one of Lord Glanely's stal[illegible] and I have never seen her looking [illegible]. Captain Hogg's only fear was [illegible] ground might be firmer than the [illegible].

St. Magnus and Black Speck were [illegible] favourites in an open market, [illegible] there was also plenty of support [illegible] Path of Peace and Terror. I was [illegible] see in the paddock that Terror [illegible] bandaged on both forelegs, and it [illegible] well have been the going which [illegible] him to "blow up" less than a [illegible] from home after making all the [illegible].

A BLINKER COINCIDENCE.

[illegible] carried his 8lb. penalty into [illegible] place, but Hypothesis was beaten [illegible] way out.

Terror was dashed into the lead the moment the tape went up, and made the running from Black Speck and Noble King. Before a furlong had been covered, however, Path of Peace had moved up into second place, followed by Alarm Bell, and, except that Alarm Bell headed Path of Peace, this was the order until the straight was reached.

Terror was in trouble a furlong from home, where he was tackled by Path of Peace, who drew out inside the distance and held off the late run of Black Speck. St. Magnus, who was last approaching the straight, never looked like repeating his success in the corresponding event 12 months ago. Incidentally, Alarm Bell, Noble King, and Intolerance all ran in blinkers without the success attending horses so clad on Thursday.

CHEERS FOR WINNFR.

Lord Derby's colours are especially popular in this district, and Fair Copy was greeted with loud applause on his return to the unsadding enclosure after he had won the Atlantic Cup.

When Lord Derby himself went up to give his winner a pat on the neck cheering broke out all round.

Fair Copy started joint favourite with Radiant, to whom he had to concede no less than 26lb., just about double the weight-for-age allowance. Radiant made the running from Glen Loan when the small field settled down, Halcyon Gift having been caught flatfooted when the tapes went up and losing half a dozen lengths.

He soon made up the lost ground, however, and approaching the straight was third to Radiant and Glen Loan, with Fair Copy last. Perryman began to move up on Fair Copy a quarter of a mile from home, and he was lucky enough to find an opening on the rails.

RADIANT'S PADDOCK VALUE.

He shot Fair Copy through, and, despite being inclined to put his head up as soon as he got in front, Fair Copy held on to resist Radiant by a length and a half, with Glen Loan beaten a neck for second place and Halycon Gift fourth.

In winning this nice prize for the second year in succession Fair Copy paid a very definite compliment to Pasch, who, in receipt of 9lbs., beat Lord Derby's horse by three lengths in the Eclipse Stakes at Sandown Park last Friday.

Radiant, a full sister to Windsor Lad, does not seem to have fulfilled her two-year-old promise, but she is undoubtedly a good filly, and whether she wins races or not has a very large paddock value.

THE YANKEE'S NARROW DEFEAT.

The Yankee was forgiven past failures, and was made favourite for the Croxteth Plate, only to be beaten a short head and a head by Aegisthus and Epinal. The winner finished fast on the stands side rails to get up in the last few strides. He is by Thyestes from Phalconia, who is a sister to Shalfleet, and so should be able to sprint.

It was interesting to note that Aegisthus came from behind to win his race as Shalfleet invariably does. Epinal was always seeming to hold The Yankee, and was hailed as the probable winner inside the distance, but he could not resist the burst of speed produced by Aegisthus in the last 50 yards.

IMPROVED AMATEUR RIDER.

Mr. Underdown is easily the most improved amateur rider in England. He won yet another race in the best Harry Wragg style when getting up close home on Spartan III. to catch and beat Scandal by half a length in the Withins Welter Handicap.

Mr. Underdown rode an absolutely identical race when winning at Liverpool in March on Spartan III., bringing his mount with one long run in the straight after being last practically all the way.

MARTIAL LAW IN MEMEL.

UNITED GERMAN PARTY'S DEMAND.

BERLIN, Friday.—The German Press [illegible] that at a sitting of the Memel Landtag yesterday evening a strong demand was made by Herr Bingau, of the United German Party, for the discontinuance of martial law in Memel.

Herr Bingau declared that martial law had persisted in Memel since 1926 without any reasonable ground. It was impossible to say that a situation which had lasted for 12 years could properly be described as "abnormal."

Herr Bingau declared (wires the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" correspondent) that the "law for the protection of people and State" was incompatible with the Memel statute, and [illegible] simply for the purpose of converting the German population into second rate citizens."

The Landtag passed a resolution demanding urgently the release of Memel inhabitants imprisoned by the Lithuanian police following the disturbances in June on the arrival of the passenger steamer from East Prussia.

The Berlin "Lokalanzeiger" accuses the Lithuanian authorities of ruthlessly suppressing the cultural and national activities of the German population in Memel, while Lithuanian newspapers, for instance, were permitted despite the state of martial law to write what they wished without fear of censorship. Promises to suspend the state of martial law had not been kept. The position in Memel had become intolerable, and although Germany was concerned at the moment chiefly with the position of the Sudeten Germans in Czecho-Slovakia, she would nevertheless never forget their equally unfortunate brothers in Memel.

THE KING'S RETURN FROM FRANCE.

THOUSANDS LINE CLIFFS

TO WATCH ARRIVAL AT DOVER.

The King and Queen arrived at Dover at 7-25 p.m. on Friday evening in glorious weather, aboard the Admiralty yacht Enchantress, which made the crossing from Calais.

Thousands of sightseers lined the cliffs at the East and West of the town, and others were on the Admiralty Pier and the Prince of Wales's Pier. Immediately the yacht came in sight the crowds burst into cheering.

The Enchantress was made fast at a berth opposite the Marine Station, a gangway was put aboard, and their Majesties, who looked remarkably well, came ashore preceded by Lord Halifax, the suite, and Court officials.

A brief reception took place on the quayside, where the King and Queen were greeted by Admiral Sir E. R. G. Evans, Commander-in-Chief The Nore, and the Mayor of Dover, Councillor J. R. Cairns, who accompanied them to the station platform, where the Royal train was waiting. Farewells were exchanged, and the train steamed out, arriving at Victoria Station, London, soon after [illegible]-0 p.m.

FERVOUR OF LONDON'S WELCOME.

London gave a characteristic fervent welcome to the King and Queen. Nearly a quarter of a million people were outside Victoria Station, and as the Royal car entered Victoria Street cheering men and women surged across the road and brought it to a momentary standstill.

Frenchmen in the crowd shouted as their Majesties drove past, "Vive la France. Vive l'Angleterre."

Mounted police cleared the way, and the King and Queen went on through dense packed streets to Buckingham Palace, where they made an unexpected appearance on the balcony.

The Queen was still in her travelling coat and the King was bareheaded.

In response to the cheers the Queen bowed and waved her hand, and then, perhaps through Gallic influence, repeatedly kissed her hand to the delighted throng, who tossed handkerchiefs, hats gloves, and newspapers high into the air as they shouted an ecstatic greeting.

The King and Queen stood there for quite two minutes, and the crowd sang the National Anthem.

Then followed three ringing cheers, and more hats and newspapers were flung high.

As they went indoors the King and Queen gave a parting wave.

KING THANKS THE TROOPS.

PARIS, Friday.—The King sent the following telegram to M. Daladier as the Minister of National Defence before leaving for Villers Bretonneux to-day:—

"I should be greatly obliged if you would convey to the troops which participated in the military parade under General Billotte my warm congratulations on their magnificent bearing and superb parade. I have been greatly impressed by all I have seen."

M. Daladier replied:—"I thank your Majesty profoundly for the eulogistic appreciation. It will go straight to the heart of the French Army."—Central News.

MR. HORE-BELISHA IN FRANCE.

PARIS, Friday.—Mr. Hore-Belisha, the British War Secretary, was received on his arrival at Amiens to-day by General Gamelin, chief of the French Defence Forces, with whom he had a conversation at an hotel, where General Gamelin gave a luncheon party in his honour before the War Secretary left for Villers Bretonneux.

To-day's conversation was the prelude, it is stated, to important discussions which will continue during the weekend. Mr. Hore-Belisha is expected to have talks with M. Daladier and General Gamelin in Paris.

The Franco-British front is being consolidated on the military as well as the diplomatic side, the "Intransigeant" remarks to-night. It is only natural that political co-operation should be extended to co-operation in national defence.—Central News.

CUSTOMS POSTS.

FERMANAGH RESOLUTION.

FLORENCECOURT AREA'S APPEAL.

At the meeting of the Fermanagh County Council in Enniskillen on Friday, Rt. Hon Sir Basil Brooke, Bart, M.P., in the chair.

The Earl of Enniskillen, G.M.G., referred to the inconvenience caused to farmers in the Florencecourt area in regard to Customs duties. His resolution was not forwarded in time to the secretary of the Council, and was not on the agenda. Therefore, he asked leave for the resolution to be moved at that meeting. He said it was in regard to the Florencecourt road through Marlbank to Blacklion, which, owing to Customs restrictions, was practically useless to anybody. It caused great inconvenience to anybody living in that district, and in order to get to Belcoo they had to go "round the world" nearly. The residents of that area had taken upon themselves to write to the head of the Customs and Excise in Belfast to have these restrictions abolished, or if that was not possible, to have them modified. He proposed that the Council back up this application, which had been made by the residents of that area, and moved that the following resolution be passed—"That we, the Fermanagh County Council, strongly support the application made by the inhabitants of the Florencecourt area to the Surveyor, H.M. Customs and Excise, Belfast, requesting the removal, or modification, of restrictions on the traffic now existing on the Marlbank-Blacklion Road, and ask that at least a concession be made to the farming community and inhabitants of this area."

Mrs. R. O. Hermon, J.P., seconded, and supported the suggestion made by Lord Enniskillen.

MR. M'LOUGHLIN'S OPINION.

Mr. John M'Loughlin thought the resolution did not go far enough, and said the whole of the Customs posts around the border of the Six Counties should be abolished.

The Chairman—You will have to apply to the Free State for that. (Laughter.)

Lord Enniskillen said the people of Florencecourt had talked about the removal of the existing Customs post to another position.

Mr. J. J. Coalter, J.P., stated that the Enniskillen Rural Council had under consideration a proposal to make a new road in the area across to the bottom of Mullaghdun, which would solve a lot of the difficulty. That road would be a connecting link.

Mr. Wm. Kelly expressed agreement with this proposal, and said this new road, if passed, would be a great help to the farmers of that district and to the whole country at large.

Mr. Coalter—It would solve the Customs difficulty, too.

Mr. W. F. Dewane said the motion of the Earl of Enniskillen would cost them nothing, but Mr. Coalter's suggestion would cost them several thousands of pounds.

The resolution was passed unanimously.

LIVERPOOL PROVISIONS—Poultry market—Fowl 7d to 7½d, chickens 10d to 11½d.

BIRKENHEAD CATTLE—A much worse trade was experienced for cattle to-day, although the quality was generally much improved. Exceptionally choice small bullocks and heifers made 8d, best handyweight bullocks around 7½d, heavy and other descriptions 7d to 7½d, young cows and bulls 5½d, other sorts 4d to 4½d. The Canadian cattle were cleared at about late rates. Lambs continued in slow trade, choice small weights with difficulty made 9d, other classes 8d to 8½d—all prices per lb. sinking the offal. The week's offerings were—1,132 Irish cattle and 439 Canadian cattle, 6,043 lambs.

CLEVELAND IRON.—Seasonal inactivity and the hampering statistical state of iron and allied trades restrict business to few and light transactions. Next to no demand for Cleveland pig foundry iron, users having still large stocks of foreign material to absorb before they can accept normal supplies of local brands. Production of East Coast hematite continues excessive, and a still further curtailment of output seems essential to check increase of already burdensome heavy stocks. Users of semi-finished iron and steel over-bought, and accumulations of tonnage at makers' works inconveniently large. Finished iron and steel manufacturers prepared to accept orders for near delivery of most commodities. Iron and steel scrap abundant and virtually unsaleable.

DUBLIN CORN—A small number of samples on offer, with sellers more active around the following prices:—White oats 14s to 15s 6d, blacks 13s to 13s 9d, and barley 18s 6d to 20s—per barrel delivered according to quality.

GLASGOW CORN.—The market remains steady, but trade in general is quiet. The value of No. 1 Northern Manitoba wheat is 39s 3d per 480lbs. c.i.f. Glasgow. Maize shows little change over the last few days, the price ranging from 27s 6d to 28s per 480lbs. c.i.f. in the forward position. Grinding barley is offered at 21s 6d to 22s per 400lbs c.i.f., while the nominal value of first grade Australian flour is 21s 6d per 280lbs c.i.f.

GLASGOW IRON AND STEEL.—Scrap metals—Prices are stabilised at present levels until the end of September. Business is practically suspended at present, and a resumption of traffic will not take place until the first week of August, when works get into [illegible] again.

HEALTH OF DERRY.

DR. ABERNETHY'S REPORT.

REFERENCE TO HOUSING.

Dr. W. R. Abernethy, Medical Superintendent Officer of Health in Derry, in his annual report to Derry Corporation states that from many points of view the year was a satisfactory one and the statistics of work accomplished and results achieved presented on the whole an agreeable retrospect.

The report is an exhaustive one, dealing comprehensively with the various work carried out during the year.

In an analysis of the statistics Dr. Abernethy states that the vital statistics evidenced a not unsatisfactory state of the general health and virility of the borough. The birth rate maintained a high standard and the death rate was below that of the two preceding years. It was gratifying to report a substantial decrease in the number of cases of infectious diseases.

With regard to housing, the report states, there are few districts in the city that could be classified as "clearance areas" and slums as understood in other boroughs were practically an unknown quantity. Extensive repairs were carried out to many dwellings during the year. There was, however, a number of houses in which extensive repairs were not an economic proposition and which eventually would have to be closed. It was gratifying to know that at an early date a local housing scheme would take effect and that insanitary dwellings and overcrowding would be abated.

HIGH SHERIFF HOST

TO JUDGES IN DERRY.

WELCOME ONE OF THEIR OWN

Further references to the peaceful state of the city of Derry were made yesterday when the High Sheriff, Sir Basil M'Farland, Bart., entertained the Judges of Assize and a representative gathering of Derry citizens to luncheon.

The High Sheriff, proposing the toast of his Majesty's Judges of Assize, said he would, with Mr. Justice Megaw's permission, ask them with special fervour to welcome one of their own, Lord Justice Babington. (Hear, hear.) His family, associated with the city since the Siege, had remained constant and loyal to the city of Derry. His brother was a prominent citizen and a successful lawyer, and they were particularly pleased that the Lord Justice's son was now a fully fledged solicitor. Lord Justice Babington's career had been followed with pride and interest by all his friends in Derry. As a man, a sportsman, and a lawyer he had proved himself to be, as his friends in Derry knew he would, an outstanding man, and now that he had been elevated to the Bench they felt sure he would continue to carry on the best traditions of the legal profession.

It was, continued Sir Basil, particularly pleasing on the occasion of his first visit to the city as a Judge of Assize to be able to present his Lordship with white gloves, denoting the absence of crime in their midst. He felt sure the members of the legal profession were not quite as pleased in regard to that. (Laughter.) The citizens were delighted that peace existed, and he felt sure they were desirous that that happy state of affairs should long continue.

LORD JUSTICE BABINGTON.

Replying, Lord Justice Babington referred to the generous hospitality which had at all times been extended to the Judges of Assize in Derry, and thanked Sir Basil both for his hospitality and remarks regarding himself. Luncheons such as those that day were of very great importance, because they gave the judges an opportunity of meeting the representative people in the city and county and getting into closer touch with them than was possible from the rather remote atmosphere of the Bench.

Referring to the presentation to him of white gloves, his Lordship went on to say that he could not remember a previous occasion on which such a gift was made to the presiding judge in that city. He could only attribute it to the much greater efficiency of the new Attorney-General. (Laughter.)

This was, proceeded his Lordship, a notable occasion in his career, to find himself as one of the Judges of Assize in his own city, and it was pleasing to think that the approval of the remarks which were expressed was sincere.

Mr. Justice Megaw also responded and said they recognised that the words that had been spoken by the High Sheriff were sincere and that they were felt, not only by those present but by the general community, because the loyalty that was to be found there was so absolutely manifest that they had no cause to complain of the honour that was always done to them. He alluded to the fact that that was the first occasion on which he had seen judges attending that function in mufti.

WIRELESS PRONUNCIATION.

Continuing in a humorous vein, his Lordship said he was glad to hear that Lord Justice Babington could pronounce Londonderry because when he heard some of the pronunciations on the wireless he wondered where that place was. (Laughter.)

The toast of the High Sheriff, proposed by Mr. M. S. Moore, H.M.L., foreman of the Grand Jury, was warmly received, and Sir Basil M'Farland, in reply, paid tribute to the guidance and assistance he had received from Mr. A. S. Craig, Under-Sheriff. He complimented the police on the happy state of affairs existing, and congratulated District-Inspector Lynn on having recently received the M.B.E. They had the Special Constabulary in reserve, and they knew that everything was well in the city, and trusted that that peaceful state would long continue.

ENGLAND'S TRADE IN CHIPS.

MILLION TONS OF POTATOES USED

There are about 30,000 fried fish shops in England and Wales, most of them run by man and wife, and they use about 1,000,000 tons of potatoes every year, said a past president of the National Federation of Fish Friers at a public inquiry at the Law Courts today.

The best season for fish friers generally, he said, was June to August or September, but in London less fish and chips were sold in the summer.

THE GARDENER'S CORNER

Disbudding Is Secret Of Better Roses

ROSES are now the chief feature in many gardens, especially in those facing the south and west, where they are showing a profusion of bloom. It is well to cut some of them before they get too expanded, as they brighten the house, and it helps the buds which are coming on.

It is desirable to disbud roses, as better flowers are the result. Two buds are generally sufficient to leave on each shoot. Exhibitors only leave one, and the quality of the flower makes up for a quantity of inferior blooms.

This also applies to roses grown in greenhouses. Some appear in a spray of four or five to a shoot. These should all be cut away, leaving the main flower.

Rose With Three Hearts.

A rose cut and seen recently had three perfect hearts, which is a freak not often seen. Another one was reported in this paper recently.

The Polyantha roses, which are popular to-day, grow in sprays (except the hybrids) and do not require to be disbudded. This also applies to the ramblers, sweet briars, and some others which look best in sprays.

Karen Polsen is a very distinct and beautiful hybrid Polyantha. Its flower is scarlet and single and attractive. It should be chosen. Aubrietias, Oriental Poppies (Queen Mexardra) and Snapdragons, which were raised in spring, are now being planted out. They are being set in clumps of from three to seven to give a good display next year. Showery weather should be made the most of for the planting out of both seedling flowers and vegetables.

Summer lists of flowers and vegetable seeds for present sowing are sent out by the prominent seedsmen. They are very useful for reference. Some hardy annuals produce finer flowers next season if their seeds are sown during July and August, and Sweet Peas sown in pots in a greenhouse in October come earlier into bloom next year, and are, as a rule, stronger than those sown in spring.

Everlasting Flowers.

Everlasting flowers are grown in some places for winter decoration. The most attractive of these appear to be some of the following:—Helipterum (Rhodanthe), Anthemoides, which is a pure white H.P., 15 inches for next year, can be sown now; also the better known Helichrysum, annual and perennial, and the annual Xeranthemum, too, which is late now for this year to be sown. Get plants. Cut besides these the Eryngiums, Honesty (in two colours, white and red), whose seed pods turn into silver moons, and the Physalises, with their orange balloons, are also useful. Then the Pampas and the Maram grasses are also sometimes brought in for this purpose, as well as several berried shoots of Cotoneasters and Barberry, and the red and yellow barked shoots of some of the handsome willows, which are specially grown to brighten the winter landscape.

Carnation Cuttings.

July is a good time to take cuttings of border Carnations. These may be planted in a nursery bed in which sand is well incorporated. If rabbits are about cover with wire netting. These plants are showing many buds now, and in order to get good specimen flowers the laterals should be cut off, leaving only a few good buds at the top of shoot, or only one if an exhibition flower is wanted. Pinks cuttings may also be taken still, although June is considered the best month for this operation. Staking is very desirable for Carnations now as they come into bloom. They are easily damaged by wind and rain.

Berries are now beginning to show on some bushes. Daphne Mezereum is covered with its attractive red berries at present, and Berberis Darwini is thickly covered with dark blue berries, which, when well looked into, appear handsome. These plants flowered early in the spring, so their berries come in summer before the majority of berry-laden plants appear in autumn, and so the year moves on.

The Raspberry Thief.

A willow wren was seen in a greenhouse. It appeared to be on the lookout for aphis insects. It was interesting to see it so close, and to be able to identify its plumage. It and the wren are the two smallest of native birds.

A blackbird was also seen sitting on a raspberry cane. It was picking off the red raspberries one by one in an enjoyable manner. Its yellow bill proclaimed it to be an errant male bird out for the day.

In the kitchen garden weeds require constant attention, as seedlings in thousands daily appear between the rows of beet, turnips, carrots and parsnip. Spinach beet, which was sown a fortnight ago, is now showing in lines. It is not too late to sow it. Parsley is well up, and requires thinning. This may be done in two operations. First, to three inches apart, and finally six inches. Vegetable marrows are forming rapidly, and will soon be ready for kitchen use. The latter crops are useful for preserves.

BISHOP AND EVIL SPIRITS.

"STUPIDITY TO DENY."

SAYS MANY AGREE WITH HIM.

Commenting in his diocesan gazette on "the unseen spiritual enemies of God," the Bishop of Ely, Dr. Bernard Heywood, writes:—

"It seems to me that to deny the possibility that in this vast universe there may be multitudes of beings besides those which we in our little world have seen or can see with the eyes of the body is sheer stupidity. Read books on astronomy and get some idea of the scale of the universe and of the physical insignificance of our planet, and then judge how destitute of imagination those people are who are not prepared to accept the possibility of the existence of other beings than men and beasts and birds and fishes and insects.

"It is thus likely that there may be unseen spiritual enemies of God (fallen creatures), to whose activity evil in various forms may be attributed. I prefer not to use the term 'demons,' because to the average man this probably suggests nothing else than the sinister figure which he encounters when he goes to a pantomime."

Dr. Heywood states that since he spoke at his last diocesan conference about the existence and possible activities of discarnate rebellious spirits many correspondents had written to say they agreed with his views.

BRITISH STEAMER STOPPED

BY JAPANESE DESTROYER.

CARGO INSPECTION REFUSED.

The British steamer Leana (4,742 tons), of Hong Kong, reports that a Japanese destroyer fired a shot across her bows on Thursday, 50 miles south of Hong Kong.

The vessel was boarded by the Japanese, who demanded to see her cargo. The Leana's master flatly refused, and after a long argument the Japanese departed, having logged the incident.

LAID-UP BRITISH SHIPPING

SHOWS A SLIGHT REDUCTION.

The Chamber of Shipping quarterly return of the number of tonnage of ships laid up at ports of Great Britain and Ireland on July 1 shows British 159 ships of 245,299 tons, foreign 39 of 86,705 tons, total 198 of 332,004 tons.

The return shows a decrease of 7,321 net tons, or 2.2 per cent., as compared with that for April 1, 1938, and an increase of 270,779 net tons, or 42.3 per cent., as compared with that for July 1, 1937. The foreign vessels include 33 Spanish vessels of 67,269 net tons, compared with 41 of 83,775 net tons on April 1, 1938.

Included in the total are twelve vessels of 14,048 net tons which have been laid up a year or longer. Among the British vessels laid up are five tankers of 15,384 net tons, of which two of 3,870 net tons are motor ships.

Saturday Commentary by Lady Oxford and Asquith

I Like To Watch the Grand and Famous

I WENT with my daughter Elizabeth (Princess Antoine Bibesco) to the lovely Royal Garden Party, given by I do not exactly know whom—because I have stupidly lost our cards of invitation.

But I think it was from "His Majesty's Government," who entertain people of distinction who come to London, and for whom receptions are given in the National Gallery, Lancaster House, and various other places. But I never remember receiving an invitation to a party given at Hampton Court, and only hope that this will become an annual event as there could be no more beautiful setting for everyone to enjoy themselves, both outside and inside, than the Palace of Hampton Court.

We started early, as I like being in time to watch all the grand and famous people arrive, especially when Queen Mary attends a ceremony. All the streets were crowded, and every window filled with eager faces to see her pass.

QUEEN MARY

There is something touching in the loyalty of British crowds. However cold, however windy, or however wet, thousands of people will stand for hours on the pavements to watch members of our Royal family when they attend some function.

Nor is there in the whole world such an orderly, well-mannered, good-humoured crowd as those in these islands.

POPULAR ROYAL FAMILY

DURING King George's Silver Jubilee a million people collected every night in front of the iron railings of Buckingham Palace in the hopes that King George and Queen Mary would come out on the balcony to acknowledge their enthusiastic cheers.

And they were never disappointed. The balcony was so efficiently floodlit that even those, like myself and others, who never at any time got close to the railings, could see our adored King and Queen with perfect ease; nor was there any attempt made by the police to regulate us.

Lord Trenchard told me that he had given special orders to Scotland Yard to use their own discretion, as he did not think it either possible or desirable to chaperon such vast crowds.

I was particularly touched when a stranger recognised me, and said: "I'll make room for you, as you have more right than any of us to be near the railings, and see the King, since your husband served him for so many years."

At which I thanked him, and replied: "On the contrary, it is all of you who have a prior claim, as it is you who have helped our King to be as popular as he is."

During all those nights there was not a tulip touched, nor a railing bent. This would not be possible in any other country, because the regimentation of everyone abroad is considered of more importance than their enthusiasm.

GUESTS WHO SHIVERED

SIR PHILIP SASSOON—who inaugurated the Garden Party at Hampton Court—received Queen Mary, and my daughter and I were fortunate in being close to her carriage when she arrived.

It was cold and windy, and though I regretted not having put on my best summer frock at such a fashionable gathering — where everyone wore their Ascot dresses—I was rewarded, as those of my friends who did not wear furs told me that they shivered.

But I know how hot it can be at Hampton Court in July, and I expect it was better for the general comfort of the guests that they were not grilled.

Queen Mary stole the picture—a common but descriptive phrase. She wore a powder blue ensemble, with a lovely toque of the same colour, and her skirt was long, which I think adds to the dignity of all elderly people.

Not that Queen Mary can ever look "elderly," as I have perceived no change in her appearance during the last 12 or more years. She has a magnificent constitution and the complexion of a girl of 18.

Had it not been for her health, she could never have stood the strain of so many sorrows, and she has the courage which is possessed by every member of our Royal family.

After we had made our curtseys, we left the lawn and the tea-tents to see the improvements which Sir Philip Sassoon has made in the Palace.

"ONE WAY" FACES

I FIND it very difficult to talk, even to my friends at Garden Parties. You see beautiful "one way" faces, and are approached by acquaintances of "snack-bar" minds, but are not in the humour to listen, and I was glad to escape the wind and go inside the Palace.

I am always apprehensive when I hear of "improvements" in the houses I have known and loved for as many years as I have the Palace of Hampton Court. But I had no need for anxiety that afternoon, as Sir Philip Sassoon has used all his taste and talent in what he has done there.

Every visitor should go and see one of the most perfect Palaces in England, and one of historic interest.

Cardinal Wolsey did not build it as an official residence; it was his private dwelling, where he lived for 15 years with a household of 500 retainers.

Henry VIII. and his wives—one after the other—lived in the Palace almost continuously; he and Anne Boleyn spent their honeymoon there. In 1537 Henry's third wife, Jane Seymour, died in the Palace, where her son—afterwards Edward VI. was born.

Charles I. lived happily at Hampton Court with his wife and children, but after his execution Oliver Cromwell took possession of it. George III. refused to live at Hampton Court, and preferred Windsor, Kensington, or Kew.

Queen Victoria threw Hampton Court open to the public, and the number of persons who annually pass through the State rooms has been computed at 300,000, and double that number visit the parks and gardens.

BEAUTY OF THE DUCHESS

I WENT to see the Rene Blum ballet at Drury Lane—the first time I have been to the Ballet this season—and enjoyed it enormously. I was lucky to get a ticket, as the theatre was crowded from cellar to ceiling.

The Duke and Duchess of Kent occupied the Royal Box for the second time since the Ballet began, and I think she adds by her beauty, dresses, and distinction to every public function which she attends.

Rene Blum is the Founder and Director of the Monte Carlo Ballet, and a brother of the brilliant French ex-Prime Minister, who has been an intimate friend of mine and my daughter for many years. In his own way Rene is as remarkable as his brother Leon, and they seem to have encountered equal difficulties on the stage as in politics.

Team-work is better understood in Britain than in France, and I deplore the quarrels which have divided into two companies the Russian Ballet which has given such immense pleasure to the British public for so many years.

I feel sad that such a genius as Massine should be separated from his former associates—Boronova, Lichin, and his wonderfully trained corps de ballet, which is better at Covent Garden than Drury Lane.

I sometimes wonder which profession engenders the most jealousy. At one time I thought it was soldiers, at another doctors, or film stars; but I have come to the conclusion that opera singers, dancers, and the stage claim the tiger's share of this disintegrating defect.

The only profession I know where there is no jealousy is the Bar; and, considering that every barrister of any distinction competes daily in the Law Courts with his adversary, I think, if my son were not a film producer, I would like him to have followed in his father's footsteps, and started by being a lawyer and ended by being a Prime Minister.

But his tastes lay otherwise; he and I—and indeed all my family—adore the Russian Ballet.

GREATEST OF ALL DANCERS

I KNEW the greatest of all dancers, Pavlova, Carsavina, and Nijinsky, and, with the exception of Carsavina, they all detested one another. Russians are not a reliable race; yet what wonderful talent they have produced!

There are no novelists in Germany, Italy, or any other country that I know with whom you could compare Tolstoy, Dostoyevsky, Turgenieff, Gorki, Gogol, or Tchekov.

LADY OXFORD
"I lost our invitation cards."

And although their composers cannot be compared with the Germans, the Austrians, or the Italians, Mussorgski, Stravinski, Rimsky-Korsakov have all been men of genius.

I shall always regret that my husband and I never went to Russia.

We had fixed on a visit to our Russian Ambassador—Count Benckendorff and his wife—in August, 1914. We were devoted to both of them, and they constantly stayed with us in the country.

PROPHECY CAME TRUE

I REMEMBER the Countess telling me, in a moment of confidence, that although my Queen Alexandra's sister was very popular, her son—the Czar—was neither strong, nor liberal enough to govern such a vast country, and that in a very short time the people would rise against him, and there would be a Revolution.

She added that she never believed in equality, but she felt certain that freedom was essential, if a nation was to be happily governed, and freedom was an unknown word in her country.

Looking back to-day, when half the world has turned its back upon freedom, and, to quote Gladstone, the negation of God has been erected into a system, I am glad that my beloved friend Sophie Benckendorff has not lived to see all that has happened of sorrow in Russia and other parts of the world.

THE SPANISH WAR.

VALENCIA STRUGGLE IN THE HEAT.

FIFTEEN DAYS' BATTLE.

HEAVY LOSSES BY INSURGENTS.

The battle for the hills and valleys on the threshold of Valencia Province is continuing in suffocating heat.

Both sides are giving attention to the problem of distributing water to the thirsty troops, clouds of pink dust betray the movements of artillery and supply lorries to reconnoitring airmen.

After 15 days' incessant fighting, with heavy casualties, the insurgent forces are still compelling the Government troops to yield ground foot by foot. Six Government brigades have vainly tried to drive Franco's troops from their new positions on the Sierra de Espadan, whose 4,000 feet summit commands Serorbe and the district to the west of the Teruel-Sagunto road for several miles.

Five insurgent soldiers captured by Government troops in the battle for Belchite in March have regained their own lines after struggling 48 miles across open, waterless country. At first they were too exhausted to speak. After having been given food, drink, and clean clothes, they were taken to the general commanding the sector. They told him they had been employed in constructing fortifications at Chelva, about 40 miles west of Sagunto. The general granted them leave to go home, states the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" correspondent.

Insurgent aircraft are dropping propaganda as well as bombs over Government territory.

The latest law introduces compulsory family allowances for all families with more than one child. The State employers and employes all contribute in fixed proportions.

It is announced that Senor Eugenio d'Ors, director of the Royal Academy of Fine Arts, and the Marquis of Villabragina will proceed to London shortly to discuss the disposition of artistic treasures belonging to the Spanish nation.

HEAVIEST BARRAGE IN THE WAR.

LAID DOWN BY ITALIANS

OVER A TWENTY-MILE FRONT.

Over a 20-mile front from north-west to the Sierra Espadan Italian forces, concentrated in this sector on Friday from dawn till 1 p.m., laid down the heaviest barrage I have seen in this war, states the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" correspondent with the Government forces.

They were making a furious attempt to break through what is known as the "XZ line," which is one of the several lines like miniature Hindenburg lines which the inhabitants of Valencia have built to defend their capital.

The scene was most impressive. At least 70 to 80 Italian batteries, which have been brought in for the Valencia offensive and include many long-range guns, cover the Government lines. These run along the ridge beyond Viver and were smothered in clouds of dust and smoke as shells rained down upon them without interruption.

STOIC RESISTANCE.

From the Sierra Espadan to north-west of Viver was an inferno, in which the Government forces resisted with amazing stoicism. To the fearful rain of shells was added a bombardment from the air, in which 70 insurgent machines took part.

The artillery engaged has been brought in by the Littorio, the 23rd Marcha and the Blue Arrow Brigades of the Italian forces. They are bearing virtually the whole weight of this attempt to smash Valencia's resistance.

FOREIGN TROOPS EVACUATION.

NO REPLY FROM FRANCO

TO THE COMMITTEE'S PLAN.

There has been no response from General Franco to the request for endorsement of the Non-Intervention Committee's plan for evacuating foreign auxiliaries from Spain, states the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" diplomatic correspondent.

In these circumstances, I learned yesterday, the Earl of Plymouth, chairman of the London Committee, contemplates the despatch to both Spanish headquarters of Mr. Hemming, secretary of the committee and draughtsman of the detailed plan, to discuss with the authorities on the spot the working of any proposals which appear to present difficulties.

THE FORGING OF WILLS.

FIVE YEARS FOR COUNCILLOR.

After a hearing of four days the trial was concluded at Leeds Assizes last night of Frederick Preston (51), an accountant and Town Councillor, of Park Avenue, Scarborough.

Preston was found guilty of 19 out of 20 charges which included forgery, fraudulent conversion and uttering forged wills, and obtaining money by forgery. He was acquitted of one count of forging a receipt for £100.

Sentencing Preston to five years' penal servitude, Mr. Justice Atkinson said it was a wicked and cruel fraud. The prosecution had alleged that from June, 1936, until early this year Preston obtained more than £2,900 by means of forged wills and fraudulent conversion from four members of a family named Hicks, of Scarborough.

In evidence on his own behalf Preston declared that all the wills in his possession were genuine and made in his favour without any influence being used by him. He denied a suggestion that the sisters Hicks were the sort of women who without the slightest hesitation would put their signatures to any document which Preston asked them to sign. He further maintained that he did not know any of the documents were forged.

PITCAIRN'S S.O.S.

CALL FOR SUPPLIES EXPLAINED.

THAT TYPHOID RUMOUR.

CAUSE OF SHIPS PASSING.

Edgar Christian, chief magistrate of Pitcairn Island, in the South Pacific, indignantly denied to me over the wireless telephone early on Friday morning that there was a typhoid epidemic among the 215 islanders, states the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" New York correspondent.

For an hour, between four and five a.m., I talked with Edgar Christian, who is aged 60 and the great-great-grandson of Fletcher Christian, leader of the mutineers of the Bounty who settled on the island in 1790.

"A rumour of typhoid," said Mr. Christian in a strong voice that came clear and distinct over the 8,000 miles of land and water separating us, "has done us incalculable harm. We have reached a crisis in our affairs that demands an immediate remedy. Food and medicines on the island are running perilously low.

ISLAND PRODUCE ONLY.

"The last ship to bring us mail and supplies called two months ago. Usually we have a visit every ten days. Ships avoid us now as though we were plague-stricken and give the island a wide berth. Tinned supplies of all kinds are exhausted and we are forced to exist on our island produce, which is bare fare. Even petrol we require to run the batteries for our new radio station, which is now the only remaining link with the outer world, is almost exhausted. The small supply which we bought with our own little stock of money is lying at Panama, unable to find a shipper to deliver it.

"Many of us are at present suffering from severe colds in this rainy season and we lack proper medical supplies to counteract them. Aspirin, quinine, iodine, antiseptics, nasal and throat sprays, and a stock of simple medicines of all kinds are urgently needed. It is useless to send us complicated remedies, as none of us has medical knowledge. Anything sent must have full instructions with it. We have no doctor on the island and do not need one unless one could be sent to certify that we are free from typhoid and that the rumours are untrue. We have not had any typhoid for more than 30 years, and our people feel very unhappy at this unfair report."

I informed Mr. Christian that his message would be conveyed to England and I was sure immediate steps would be taken to send succour.

WHISPERS CLEARLY HEARD.

The distinctness with which sound travelled across the great space that divided us was startling. When Mr. Christian was summoned from his bed — it was nearly midnight on Pitcairn Island—and he entered his radio shack the little group of people who sat with me in a silent room on Long Island could hear the door bang and the whispers of Andrew Young, the island's radio operator, as he informed his leader of the object of my call.

The operator told us that it was a cold night on Pitcairn Island and raining hard. He had to walk a quarter of a mile over muddy tracks to arouse Mr. Christian.

The interview, possibly one of the longest two-way talks ever made, was rendered possible by the courtesy of Mrs. Dorothy Hall, one of the best-known amateur wireless operators in America. Her station has been in constant communication with Pitcairn Island for the last six months. She is on the friendliest terms with the islanders, who regard her as a personal link with the outside world.

Her station is the only one with which Pitcairn Island is in contact.

Another immediate necessity for the islanders is an improved radio set, especially a modern receiver. Even the inadequate set they have was given by Americans who have frequently sent gifts to Pitcairn and seem more interested in the islanders than their fellow British subjects.

[It is understood that the Colonial Office have instituted inquiries into the situation on Pitcairn Island, but that the matter is stricly one for the High Commissioner for the Western Pacific, Sir Arthur Richards, resident at Suva, Fiji.]

RIOT IN THE HEART OF DUBLIN.

ITALIAN SAILORS MAULED.

"DOWN WITH MUSSOLINI" CRIES.

Italian sailors from the naval cadet training ships at present lying in Dublin Harbour were attacked by a large crowd of young men in O'Connell Street, Dublin, on Friday night.

The incident occurred at 10 o'clock, when the sailors, numbering about 20, were walking along O'Connell Street. They were jeered at by some youths, and immediately others joined in the baiting. The seamen ignored them at first, and the mob followed, shouting "Down with Mussolini" and "Up the Spanish Brigade."

The crowd had now assumed ugly proportions, and the sailors were surrounded outside a cinema and threatened. Civic Guards then arrived on the scene and escorted the seamen to the quayside, the crowd meantime following and shouting threats and jeering.

Later there were several scuffles in various parts of the city, and in one instance when a party of sailors had reached the Custom House and were being harried by a hostile crowd they turned on the mob.

During the last few days posters have appeared on some of the Dublin hoardings advocating a boycott on the visitors. They were headed "Fascist warships in Dublin Bay," and went on, "Citizens of Dublin, protest against this Fascist propaganda visit." The poster also makes a demand for the release of Frank Ryan, a prisoner of the Franco forces.

CHIMNEY STACK STRIKE.

BY DARTMOOR CONVICT.

A Dartmoor convict named Danny Dawson, said to be a cat burglar, defied the authorities for nearly ten hours yesterday while he squatted on the top of a 100ft. chimney stack in the middle of the prison buildings.

He is believed to have carried out this adventure as a protest during the visit of the Prison Commissioners.

He made his thrilling climb to the top of the stack by means of a pipe line, which only a man of unusual agility could have negotiated. He remained on the top all day despite the efforts of warders to get him down.

An attempt was made to smoke him out by stoking up a fire beneath the chimney, but he simply changed his position and got to windward of the smoke clouds. From his lofty position he could be seen from outside the jail and hundreds of visitors gathered to watch the escapade.

The convict continued his sit-down strike until 5-30 in the evening when he consented to come down.

HEIRESS'S ROMANCE.

TO MARRY SHOE OPERATIVE.

Edward James Stewart, the £3 a week shoe operative, of Wollaston, near Wellingborough, whose engagement to Miss Elsie Maltby, the heiress daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Maltby, of Haslemere, Surrey, caused a surprise last year, will be married to her at St. Bartholomew's Church, Haslemere to-day.

Mr. Stewart met his bride-to-be on a visit to his aunt, who is nurse-companion to Miss Maltby's mother. They became friendly, and the friendship developed into romance. Miss Maltby has paid several visits to Mr. Stewart's cottage home at Wollaston and taken him for long drives in her car. To-day 50 of his friends, including fellow-workers at Messrs. Rivett's shoe factory at Wollaston, are travelling by car to attend the ceremony.

Mr. Stewart is a server at Wollaston Parish Church, and Miss Maltby recently opened a chrysanthemum bazaar held by the Church at Wollaston.

Mr. Stewart intends to carry on his work at the shoe factory after the wedding. The bride's father is head of Messrs. Maltby, the London firm of stevedores.

LINEN TRADE REVIEW

Bleach And Dyeworks' Position

Trade as a Whole More Hopeful—Spinners' Firm Stand—Cotton Imports' Problem—Strong Case for Government Action—Bleaching and Dyeing Art—Ulster Can Hold Its Own—How This Section Is Endangered—Increasing Costs Factor.

(From a Special Correspondent)

The holiday feeling persists in Bedford Street as few Ulster mills and factories reopened this week. The majority will restart on Monday, but it is unlikely that the trade will really get into its stride until the week following.

The buying movement, which started on the eve of the holidays, seems likely to extend, due to the confidence engendered by the more favourable outlook in the stock and commodity markets at home and abroad.

Unquestionably a more cheerful and optimistic spirit is apparent in Ulster linen circles. Prices have been bumping along the bottom far too long, and the upward trend should become more marked from now onwards. Flax values are firm with an advancing tendency. Yarn and cloth stocks are abnormally low and the stage is now set for increased turnover at economic prices. The scarcity of better grade tows has been reflected recently in the bulk purchases made by Ulster manufacturers of medium numbers of tow yarns for early delivery. Good business has also been booked in combed tow spins.

Irresistible Arguments.

Spinners are taking a firm stand in regard to yarn prices, and their arguments are irresistible in view of the tone of the flax markets. Germany is reported to be angling for the balance of the stocks held by the Latvian Flax Monopoly at stiff rates, and the Soviet and Estonian Monopolies appear to be perfectly indifferent as to whether they sell or not. On the Courtrai aud Dutch markets prices are fully maintained due to the scarcity of the grades favoured by Ulster spinners. Demand for low grade Flemish flax has improved and prices have hardened accordingly. The small quantities of Blue Dutch available have been absorbed at an increase of a few pounds per ton, and Yellow Dutch has held its ground well. Flax-pulling is now in full swing on the Continent, under adverse weather conditions in some districts, which will lead to an increase in dew-retting. A small quantity of Irish flax trickled into Strabane market on Wednesday, and sold at from 8s to 9s per stone.

Normal flax values:—Fourth Group Slanetz, £85-86, basis 1; Ralo Tow, No. 8, £67-68; Latvian Livonian R, £69-70; Werro-Petschory Halves, R, £69-70; Lithuanian group 1, R, £60-61. All per ton, c.i.f. United Kingdom. Nominal values in Ulster of machine-hackled water-retted tows, medium quality, are Courtrai £63-75 per ton; Irish, £56-65 per ton, and Baltic £52-58 per ton.

Nominal Irish linen yarn values:—Sheer Warps 90's to 110's, 7s 4½d per bundle; 130's, 7s 9d per bundle; Cambric warps, 75's to 85's, 7s 4½d per bundle; 100's, 7s 9d per bundle. Tow wefts, 16's, 12s 9d per bundle; 22's, 10s 6d per bundle; 25's, 10s per bundle; 30's, 9s per bundle. Line wefts, 50's, 7s 9d per bundle; 70's, 7s, 80's, 6s 7½d; 90's to 130's, 6s 7½d; 140's, 6s 9d per bundle. All per bundle of 60,000 yards of grey yarn, subject to usual trade discounts.

Nominal Scotch dryspun linen yarn values:—Flax warp 3s 6d for 2½lbs., 4s for 3lb., weft 3s 5d for 2½lb., 3s 11d for 3lb., tow warp 3s 5d for 3½lb., 3s 8d for 4lb., 4s 3d for 5lb., weft 3s 2d for 3½lb., 3s 5d for 4lb., 4s for 5lb., prime warp 3s 9½d for 2½lb., 4s 3½d for 3lb.

Lancashire Cotton Market.

The Liverpool cotton market has been quiet and featureless all week, and no particular quality of raw material calls for special mention. Occasional small price fluctuations have made little difference to the general tendency which is quiet and firm. If anything, F.G.F. uppers show more strength than the other growths, but there is no substantial change in values. Cotton yarns are extremely dull, according to Sir Jacob Behrens & Sons, and, although here and there one comes across Lancashire spinners who can boast of having booked some good business during the past few days, the general impression is that trade is small and unsatisfactory. Production, sales and deliveries are at a low level. These conditions are reflected only too vividly in the export returns for June. The total is slightly lower even than the low figure for May. It is true that a number of the smaller markets have increased their takings and Germany, also, has received half a million pounds more than in last month. Roumania has taken about £200,000 less. It is interesting to note that the reduction in quantity since last year has been divided fairly equally over the different classes of counts, although it is noticeable that between 26s and 40s the reduction has been rather more severe than in the other counts. Quotations remain steady, but in the absence of business, real price testing is difficult.

Cotton cloth prices are keeping very steady, but buyers are still diffident, and no weight of business is being booked. The market can only be described as quiet; from India and other Eastern markets there is a fair flow of inquiry usually, however, for small quantities, and at unacceptable limits and for quick delivery, which it is often impossible to arrange. This is the holiday time of the year, and buyers do not realise how time passes, and that it is now quite impossible to give shipment complete in the early autumn, although quotations may have been made on this basis only a few weeks ago. On the whole the cotton market is uninteresting though not without possibilities should greater confidence be shown.

The rapid growth of imports of foreign textiles and other consequent abnormal conditions of competition in the home market were discussed a few days ago by the Executive of the Joint Committee of Cotton Trade Organisations. It was reported that numerous complaints had been received both from trade organisations and individual firms, that the prices at which many imported textiles were being offered in the home market made it impossible for British firms to compete, and that the goods in question are in some cases subsidised, while in others they are produced under conditions and rates of wages which would not be tolerated in this country. The problem is even more serious than the actual volume involved would suggest since a comparatively small quantity of low-priced goods can completely disorganise the market. This is important to the linen industry, as the home market is calculated to absorb 40 per cent of Ulster's linen output.

Reference was made to the fact that imports of textiles are much greater in value than imports of motor-cars, and that they have been growing more rapidly. It was felt, therefore, that a strong case existed for immediate Government action. It was therefore agreed to invite other organisations in the textile industry, and in the making-up trades to support a united request to the Government to deal with this problem.

Ulster Bleach and Dyeworks.

Within the past fortnight two very interesting letters have appeared in the correspondence columns of the "Belfast Telegraph" on the subject of the bleaching, dyeing and finishing industry in Northern Ireland. These correspondents, to wit "Loyal Ulster Worker" and "Ulster Bleacher," agree that almost one-third of Ulster's bleachworks and many dyeworks have passed out since the war, and both writers have implied that we have lost this business to Great Britain. I very much doubt whether they are correct in this assumption, as not a few Ulster bleach and dyeworks depend largely upon English textile manufacturers for their work, and it is the English finishers and dyers who suffer in consequence, despite our disadvantage in regard to freight. "A good article is worth a good modern finish," as the Lancashire textile man said when he sent his son to Oxford and his cloth to Northern Ireland.

Admittedly, a large number of works in Northern Ireland have closed their doors during these difficult post-war years. Some have been closed down by the Association simply because there was not enough work to go round, and they naturally and reasonably wished to rationalise their industry and maintain prices at an economic level. This spirit of co-operation is possessed by bleachers and finishers in a marked degree, and while it has been criticised as "enlightened selfishness," it is an admirable policy if not carried too far. Some works failed and were taken over by the Association, who scrapped the machinery and held (or are still holding) the premises until they found a buyer who would give them an undertaking that the works would not be used for bleaching and dyeing. Other works failed and were scrapped by the receiver or liquidator on behalf of the creditors, independent from association action. Still other Ulster bleaching, dyeing, and finishing works closed down and were scrapped because their owners wished to retire from business and failed to find buyers for their properties as going concerns. It is certain that the English and Scottish bleaching and dyeing industries have suffered far more casualties proportionately than the Irish trade. Works after works across the Channel have been dismantled or closed down for an indefinite period.

Analysing the Irish mortality list we find that not a few of the defunct works belonged to the textile printing section, which has fared notoriously badly since the war, due to intensive competition from overseas firms who are protected by high tariff barriers. Northern Ireland once possessed numerous textile printworks, but the past few years have witnessed the dismantling of Crawford's (Dunmurry), Mulhouse Printworks (Belfast), Clonard Printworks (Belfast), Glen Printing and Finishing Co., Ltd. (Newtownards), and—very recently—Oldpark Printworks (Belfast). Glen Printworks owned two bleaching and dyeing works in the Carrickfergus district; one was sold as a going concern, and is still running while the other (Sullatober) was dismantled recently. To-day there are only two printworks in the whole of Ireland. One is the flourishing Ulster Printworks, Ltd., Newtownards, and the other is the small printworks operated by Clendinning & Co., at Lurgan. It is hoped, however, that a certain London firm may open a factory in Newtownards shortly for the development of a new invention for the printing of coloured designs upon washable fabrics. By a colour photographic process, it is claimed, the printing of small quantities of fancy textiles may be made a paying proposition.

Water and Climate Ideal.

It need hardly be pointed out that shrinkage has not been confined to the bleaching and dyeing section of the Irish linen industry, as the casualty rate has been higher in the case of the spinning and weaving sections of the trade. No new Ulster flax spinning mills or linen weaving factories have been erected since the war, but two important new Ulster bleachworks have been erected comparatively recently, while some old-established works have built considerable extensions. There is a growing tendency for the "composite houses" to control every section of manufacture of their goods. Thus a leading Belfast weaving firm became merged with an old-established County Antrim bleachworks within recent months.

The water and climate of Ulster are ideal for bleaching and dyeing, and the methods and mechanical equipment of our leading works are unrivalled. Extraordinary progress has been made in the bleaching, dyeing and processing of linen yarns and fabrics since the Great War. The linen trade dates back 60 centuries, but until less than 200 years ago the bleacher's sole equipment was a barrel of buttermilk and a patch of grass.

Until about 20 years ago there were only two colours in linen—one was bleached and the other unbleached. True, there were a few red and white tablecloths, but these were rarely linen. Until the introduction of a reliable process of vat dyeing of piece-goods by the Sundour people the Irish linen manufacturer frowned upon the dyeing of linen fabrics. He thought, quite rightly, that it was almost a criminal act to defile the high quality of his fabrics with colour which was no better than a fleeting stain. The use of vat dyes, with a permanence worthy of linen, was altogether a different proposition. However their use in the linen industry was arrested by the war, which found other work for the linen trade to do, and also cut off supplies of vat colours from Germany. To-day, thanks both to individual research and to the tireless scientists of the Linen Industry Research Association, Ireland offers a permanent, unalterable combination of the finest quality linen with the fastest dyestuffs. Novel applications of colour to linen are continually being produced in Ulster, and these are of particular appeal in the U.S.A. market, where Eve has a mania for "matching everything." Within the last decade millions of dollars worth of advertising have been spent in educating Madam U.S.A. into colour consciousness, and this is a trend which has come to stay. Present day colours penetrate to the very heart of the flax fibre, and white specks and surface nappiness have been banished.

Bleaching Problem.

Hitherto one of the great problems in bleaching linen has been the difficulty of getting rid of the "sprit" without over-bleaching the rest of the cloth. The new method, worked out in Ulster, consists of a preliminary treatment for the yarns, which attacks the woody matter but leaves the fibre unharmed. As a result of this treatment the bleaching property may be carried out even more gently than before, thus improving the strength and wear of the linen. Until comparatively recently there was no accurate method of testing the effects of bleaching on cloths. Such a test, however, is now available, thanks to the work of the Linen Industry Research Association. Known as the "solubility test," this is a method of measuring the soundness—or otherwise—of bleached linen by the amount of broken-down fibre present. A high number means that the percentage of fibre is excessive and shows that the cloth has been weakened by faulty bleaching. A low solubility number means sound bleaching. Previously a solubility number of 8 was considered pretty good, but to-day it is possible to lower it to 4 in Northern Ireland. Comparatively recently a leading Co. Antrim concern installed a very expensive plant to zero-shrink linen and cotton goods, and I understand that this enterprise is proving remarkably successful. A short time ago a works near Belfast installed what is probably the fastest stenter range in the world, and another Ulster concern quickly followed suit. Yet another Ulster bleachworks has just installed what is probably the finest pulverised fuel boiler plant in Ireland. Ulster finishers can now produce crease-resisting, wrinkle-proof, pre-shrunk, stain-resisting and water-proof textile and a host of other special finishes. Ulster leads the world in linen yarn bleaching methods, such as the new peroxide bleach.

The purpose of the foregoing is to show that we need harbour no inferiority complex about our bleaching and dyeing industry. It will more than hold its own when trade becomes normal, and there are fresh fields for it to conquer.

Thoughtful Letter.

In a very thoughtful letter, which appeared in the "Belfast Telegrapr" on Thursday, "An Ulster Bleacher" pointed out how the trade is endangered by the new Factories Bill, which, as drafted, limits working house to 48 hours per week. In Great Britain, as he has shown, it may be possible for bleachers and dyers to work overtime "by reason of the exigencies of the trade."

This is a highly important point, as bleaching and dyeing processes require not merely skill but defined periods of time for each section of the process. "Machinery and organisation," to quote "Ulster Bleacher," "have been planned with some considerable difficulty to allow the processes to be undertaken on the basis of 49½ working hours per week. The working hours have to be arranged according to the process, as the process cannot be arranged to suit working hours."

In Northern Ireland there is not only the question of an increase in wages by reason of overtime rates, but additional plant will have to be installed, and the entire processes reorganised, thus adding substantially to the costs of maintaining bleach works in Northern Ireland.

Doubtless our Government will give this reasonable and well-founded plea the close consideration which it merits, and take appropriate action in good time. "An Ulster Bleacher" also maintains that a large part of our making-up trade has been transferred to Great Britain due to the introduction of the Board of Trade. This is only a half-truth, as we have lost the bulk of this trade through the regrettable policy adopted by our foreign customers of buying more and more goods in the piece, and having them made up either in their home and tariff-sheltered market or in the Orient, where skilful embroiderers and other workers live happily on a bowl of rice per day. It is difficult to see how any Government action can help us in this direction.

Irish Flax Notes.

Our active Irish Flax Committee have now reurned from their "busman's holiday" on the Continent, where they saw flax being pulled by machine as fast as a horse can walk. I learn that Monsieur Maurice Soenens (pronounced Soo-nen), the well-known Courtrai flax expert, will arrive in Belfast on August 4 for a short stay. He will attend some demonstraions of flax pulling by machinery which are to be staged by the Northern Ireland Ministry of Commerce in Ballymena, Limavady, Newtownstewart, Dromore, Dromara, and other Ulster flax districts early next month.

UNCLE SAM TAKING STRONG STAND

ON MEXICO SITUATION.

DEMAND FOR ARBITRATION

ON SEIZED AMERICAN LANDS.

Mr. Cordell Hull, the Secretary of State, held a conference on Friday with representatives of American oil companies arising out of Mexico's confiscation of oil properties, states the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" Washington correspondent.

On Thursday night, Mr. Hull handed a Note to the Mexican Ambassador, Dr. Najera, requesting arbitration on the amount of compensation to be paid to American citizens whose lands have been expropriated by Mexico.

Friday's conference strengthened the opinion that the United States would take a similar line in regard to the oil properties confiscated by Mexico.

Mr. Hull declined to comment on the Note delivered to the Mexican Ambassador, but on the question of the oil negotiations said that there had been continuous exchanges of views, both oral and written, with the Mexican Government, with the object of reaching an amicable and just settlement.

One particular phrase in the American Note on the confiscation of land might be considered applicable to the oil situation. Mr. Hull wrote:—

"Taking property without compensation is not expropriation. It is confiscation. It is no less confiscation, because there may be an expressed intention to pay at some time in the future."

Mr. Hull, moreover, has always taken the line that the seizure of the oil properties was but one of a long series of seizures of various kinds of American property by Mexico.

CARDENAS THREATENS REPRISALS.

The Mexican Government, in considering its reply to the United States Note of Thursday challenging Mexico's right to expropriate alien properties without immediate cash compensation is understood to be debating the possibility of making counter-claims, states the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" Mexico City correspondent.

It is also said to be considering whether it should exercise its reservation to the Joint Arbitration Treaty of 1929 mentioned by Mr. Cordell Hull in his Note. Under this reservation Mexico agreed to arbitrate only if the competent Mexican authority agreed.

There is widespread opinion in Mexico that, while the United States Note dealt specifically with agrarian properties seized—said to amount to 1,000,000 acres—it laid down the principle of immediate payment for all properties, including oil, in which Britain is particularly interested.

Therefore, to an extent, the Note represented parallel action between the United States and the British Governments.

Official circles are inclined to believe that whether Mexico accepts arbitration—which might demonstrate her inability to pay even the agrarian indemnity, not to mention the indemnity on the huge oil investments—depends to a large extent on the degree to which Washington supports its Note.

FORCING MATTERS.

The United States State Department, it is said, is apparently determined to force matters—in fact, Mr. Cordell Hull published his Note on Thursday before the Mexican Ambassador to Washington, Dr. Najera, had transmitted to his Government any indication of it.

Some circles are inclined to fear, however, that any arbitration would be long drawn-out on the basis of past experience, and that both the Governments of President Roosevelt and President Cardena would be out of office under the expiration of their terms before a decision on arbitration was reached.

GERMANY'S STAPLE FIBRE EXPORTS

BERLIN, Friday.—During the first five months of this year Germany's exports of staple fibre (a synthetic wool substitute), amounted to 420 tons, valued at £51,250 at the present rate of exchange.

These figures show a considerable increase over those for 1937, when the total exports of staple fibre for the whole year were only 270 tons.

As long as men have

As long as men have eyes, and hearts, they will thrill to the youthful beauty of an exquisitely lovely complexion—soft skin as velvety as roses and smooth as flower petals.

Make such beauty yours—with fragrant, foamy Icilma. This light non-greasy cream is prepared by beauty experts with all the science and knowledge of modern beauty care and skin nutrition at their finger-tips; and it is the only cream blended with beauty-giving water from the famous Algerian Spring of Hammam Selama.

Use Icilma to protect your skin from sun and wind and to free it from blackheads and unsightly blemishes. See how quickly it vanishes, how smoothly it holds your powder—and delight in its captivating perfume. Invite Romance; use Icilma daily to bring romantic, youthful beauty to your skin.

BULLET WOUNDS MAY PROVE FATAL.

SPINE AND HEART THREATENED

Stanko Rozankovich, a mechanic, of Petrinje, in Croatia (Yugo-Slavia), is expected to die at any moment—from two bullets fired 20 years ago.

While serving in the Great War, Rozankovich was caught in a blast of machine-gun fire and riddled with ten bullets.

Eight of them were removed, but it was considered dangerous to attempt to extract the others, and, as the man felt all right, it was decided to leave them alone.

Recently Rozankovich felt internal pains. He went to a doctor, and an X-ray revealed that the bullets were on the point of completing a circuit of his body. They are now travelling in the direction of his spinal column and his heart. When either is reached it is feared Rozankovich will die.

WITCHCRAFT IN ITALY.

Belief in witchcraft still survives in odd corners in Italy as it does the world over, and a curious case is reported from Galliate, in Piedmont.

A 70-year-old man named Brustio attributed his ill-health to the spells cast by an 84-year-old woman named Bastiola. Brustio held a family council, at which it was decided to seek the advice of another reputed sorcerer, who confirmed that Bastiola was the source of the trouble and must be "suppressed."

Brustio's friends, therefore, visited Bastiola, but, whatever their intentions may have been, they were rendered fruitless by the fact that the old woman was found dead. When Brustio heard the news his joy was so boundless that he had a heart attack which killed him.

Brustio's friends put their heads together and decided that even in death the old Bastiola's spells persisted and that the only cure was to burn her body and all belonging to her. Unfortunately the fire did not stop at her cottage, but spread to other houses in the village, which all went to show that the old woman cast very potent spells indeed.

7TH CENTURY SWEDISH GRAVES.

Excavations of grave-mounds at Valsgärde, near Old Upsala, the centre of pagan Sweden, have brought to light extremely interesting relics illustrating the living conditions and customs of the Swedes in the 7th and 8th centuries. The excavations were carried out during the period 1928-1936, and it has taken two further years of infinite patience to preserve the fragile but valuable objects which are now on show at a special exhibition in Upsala.

The most remarkable finds are those of pieces of tent-cloth 10 feet long made of birch-bark softened by boiling, fragments of home-made and imported cloth and a cuirass of unique type. The finds also include beautifully ornamented swords, numerous arrow heads and quivers which still show that the wooden shafts have been coloured to mark the owner, and helmets reconstructed from hundreds of fragments. There are also a complete set of kitchen utensils and well-preserved parts of drinking horns and harness, which have made possible several fine reconstructions. Altogether eight so-called boat-graves have been excavated.

SCULPTOR'S HOME AS MUSEUM.

Professor Carl Milles, the renowned Swedish sculptor, has recently given his home at Lindingö, near Stockholm, with its remarkable collection of objects of art to be preserved for the benefit of the public. The house, which is already open to the public, is, according to the wishes of the donor, to be an art museum where concerts and other artistic entertainments may also be given. Nature and art are here most happily combined. The building and grounds are situated high on the slopes of the island of Lidingö with a fine view over a channel of the Stockholm Archipelago.

The estate possesses a wealth of objets d'art, many set amid the flowers and shrubs in the beautifully laid out garden. Besides Milles own creations, there are numerous other objects, such as figures of Christ and other religious symbols collected by the sculptor's Roman Catholic wife. It is intended to procure copies of all the works executed by Milles in order to get a complete and concentrated view of his great creative powers.

Milles's most recent work is the "Delaware Ship," a large monument in granite recently unveiled in Delaware, U.S.A., to commemorate the foundation there of the Swedish colony of "New Sweden" 300 years ago.

HE ARRESTED HAUPTMANN.

Timothy A. Clune, ace New York detective and one of the men who arrested Bruno Hauptmann, the German carpenter, for the kidnapping and murder of the Lindbergh baby, has died here following an operation for a brain tumour.

It was on September 18, 1934, that Detective Clune, together with Lieut. Daniel Finn, laid Hauptmann by the heels and arrested him. Subsequently he received an official citation for his work in connection with the case.

Detective Clune's brilliant police work was concerned in many other noted crimes. He investigated the brutal murder of beautiful Vivian Gordon in 1931, gave evidence against the late "Dutch" Schultz, and helped to arrest the murderer of Archbishop Leon Tourian, who was stabbed to death in his Armenian church in Washington Heights on Christmas Eve, 1933.

SOFT HEART LED TO UNDOING.

Ismet Nedopek may be a burglar of ability (says a Belgrade message), but obviously his temperament handicaps him. He and a brother burglar carried out a very successful robbery at the house of a rich Moslem named Ethem Sakach, but when Ismet examined a suit of clothes which he had taken he found in it the victim's passport and identity papers. The importance of these to a Yugo-Slav is incalculable, as it is impossible to move about the country without them.

Ismet was willing to take Ethem's goods but could not bear the thought of the Moslem being deprived of the papers which testified to his honourable standing, so he sent them back by post.

But the ways of the Yugo-Slav police pass the understanding of a simple fellow like Ismet. They deciphered fingerprints on the returned documents and then compared them with their file of those of known wrongdoers. Ismet now has ample time in jail to reflect upon the folly of being too soft-hearted.

MEANT TO DIE—NOT THAT WAY.

A Belgrade (Yugo-Slavia) house-painter, Jovan Elchich, driven to desperation by unemployment and the burden of a starving family, decided to commit suicide by hanging himself from a beam in a shed.

The only piece of rope he could find, however, was rotten and it broke under his weight, letting him fall heavily on to the concrete floor. His skull was fractured and he died shortly after he had been found.

AUSTRALIA AND DEFENCE.

AIRCRAFT WORKS AT SYDNEY.

It is understood that a proposal has been submitted to the Federal Government for the establishment of a factory in Sydney to manufacture British types of military aircraft.

The co-operation of the following British companies is stated to be assured—Airspeed (1934), Ltd., Portsmouth; Heston Aircraft, and Armstrong-Siddeley Motors.

The project would supplement the operations of the Government-backed aircraft factory at Melbourne, which is now building 40 American 1a 33-type 'planes for the Australian Air Force.

There is a strong body of expert opinion here that advocates that British machines should be manufactured to meet demands from the Air Forces of South Africa, New Zealand, Malaya and India.

SCHOOLGIRL'S £300 FIND.

COPENHAGEN, Friday.—A platinum brooch set with pearls and brilliants and valued at £250 to £300, which is believed to be the one reported lost by Lady Webb Johnson when she visited Fredriskborg Castle on Tuesday, was found in the castle courtyard by a schoolgirl. She handed it to the police, who forwarded it to Scotland Yard.—Exchange.

VANISHING BLEACH GREENS

Where And Why The Ulster Linen Trade Lags

LOST MAKE-UP BUSINESS

Sir,—Allow me space in your letter column to reply to a few points raised by your correspondent "An Ulster Bleacher" in his reply to "Loyal Ulster Worker." He says "that it is true, as regards bleach greens, that almost one-third in number of those which operated in Northern Ireland 20 years ago have now gone out of existence." Any child leaving a public elementary school, say, ten years ago, could have answered that question, and could also have told that, with the introduction of chemicals, linens and cottons can be bleached in almost any country.

He raises a point about the new Factories Bill and wails like most employers if it to any extent improves the lot of the workers, just because the Bill, embracing this particular industry, grants a 48-hour week to the workers, which will mean, he says, "that in Northern Ireland there is not only the question of an increase in wages by reason of overtime rates, but additional plant will have to be installed and the entire processes reorganised."

It is my opinion that a similar Bill should have been passed years ago, to arouse some of our sleeping employers to the fact that "time marches on." We could have had the machinery of our foreign competitors' factories installed in every factory here, and with the skill of the Ulster worker we would still have been standing aloft as the finest linen producers in the world. He mentions the "lost making-up trade," and comes to the conclusion that with the introduction of the Trade Board embracing this particular trade "that the trade has been largely transferred to Great Britain." Is he aware that the wages paid in every textile industry in Great Britain is considerably higher than that of Northern Ireland. Is he also aware of the fact that the highest paid men covered by the Trade Board of Northern Ireland are linen lappers—1s 3d per hour for a 47-hour week. If this is the reason they lost the making-up trade the soon it's lost the better as far as the worker is concerned. Perhaps that is why some of our leading manufacturers find it more convenient to ship cloth to China and Japan to be made-up and then re-shipped back here!

If "An Ulster Bleacher" would visit some of the warehouses in the city, accompanied by "Loyal Ulster Worker," and see the cloth woven by Ulster workers and bleached by loyal Ulster workers being stamped along the selvedges alternately every two or three yards "Made in Great Britain" and "Made in England," perhaps he would get at the bottom of what is wrong with our textile trade.—Yours, etc.,

"J.C."

SPAIN AS SOVIET REPUBLIC.

"INCONTESTABLE PROOF,"

DECLARES THIS WRITER.

Sir,—A few words in reply to Alderman Midgley. "Friends of freedom everywhere," he says, "must join in sending good wishes and sympathy to the Spanish Government for their effort to retain popular government." There is incontestable proof that the Spanish Government had prepared to declare Spain a Soviet Republic on July 30, 1936. It was this proof and the record of the Government during the four months of their office prior to the rebellion on July 18 which caused the majority of patriotic Spaniards to throw in their lot with the insurgents. During these four months there occurred 251 attacks on churches, 269 people murdered, 1,287 wounded, 138 armed robberies, 381 Political Centres of the Right attacked (69 destroyed), 43 newspaper offices attacked (10 demolished), 146 bombs thrown, 113 general and 228 partial strikes. This, accompanied by deportation of political opponents to the hinterland of West Africa and expropriation of their property, denial of all rights of free speech and association made revolution inevitable. The "freedom" Mr. Midgley envisages is the freedom of the prison yard, the firing squad and the charnel house of Moscow massacre.

It is to be observed that none of the Governments obtaining in Spain since Royalty was expelled has acted in a legal and constitutional manner, and the present alleged Government, consisting of a gang of Communist-Anarchist-Socialist-Bolshevik terrorists, have a record of at least 400,000 murders to their account. The bomb, bullet, knife and petrol can are their symbols of authority. On the other hand, all genuine Republicans are on the insurgent side, and Franco himself was in trouble twice during the Royalist regime for his Republican sympathies. It is not true, as Mr. Midgley says, that Government Spain "has been betrayed and forsaken by the other Powers." Of the £80,000,000 in gold abstracted from the Bank of Spain and illegally, by Spanish law, exported to France, Russia received a first payment of £20,000,000 for the equipment of an expeditionary force which, with the International Brigade, saved Madrid from capture in November, 1936. The constant stream of ships from Odessa to Barcelona has almost petered out now as the money is starting to run out, the transit becoming exceedingly dangerous. Russia, being aware that "the game is up" in Spain, has turned her attention to China and is also busily engaged in "liquidating" fellow Bolshevists who displease the "God" of that country.

FRANCE AS VILLAIN OF PEACE.

From France, on the other hand, it is reliably estimated that between 300 and 400 tons of munitions per week cross into "Government" Spain. It was in France that almost all the International Brigade was recruited and it was France who objected to the inclusion of personnel in the first non-intervention pact. Within the past fortnight a proposal to close the Spanish-French frontier led to a stormy scene in the Chamber, the sitting having to be twice suspended and the members indulging in fisticuffs in the lobbies. Fenner Brockway, who probably knows more about it than Mr. Midgley, speaking in Glasgow, said, "When the history comes to be written it will be found that France has done as much as any country." Senor Alex Lerroux, ex-Prime Minister of Spain and leader of the Radical Party, said, "There remained neither liberty nor justice, order or peace. The Army has not revolted, not broken with discipline. It seeks to restore a discipline broken by anti-patriotic traitors and criminal Anarchists—not against but for the law: not against but for the people."

Dr. George Maranon, Pres. Acad. Medicine, Madrid, one of the founders of the Republic, said: "I have been misled. I have been mistaken. Save for a few new-fangled 'Catholics' who persist in their prejudice in favour of Communism, all the intellectuals of Spain think as I do, speak as I do, and, like me, have had to flee from Spain to save our lives." All unbiassed witnesses, without exception, who have visited Insurgent Spain, have borne testimony to the fact that law and order, justice and freedom prevail; education, business, and religion pursue a normal course to such an extent that it is only immediately close to the fighting front that it could be realised that a war was raging in the country, while on the Government side anarchy, confusion, riot, and murder prevail. The end may, unfortunately, be many months off, but it is inevitable. What is also certain is that the villains of the piece have made every preparation for clearing out when the crisis comes.—Yours, etc.,

"ARRIBA ESPANA."

WHY BRING IN RELIGION?

Sir,—May I trouble you once more regarding Alderman Midgley's letter on Spain. Why will your correspondents on the subject bring in religion? In this case it does not come into the picture at all. Neither side is claiming Divine direction in this struggle, so why should outsiders impute such claim to them? Further, any student of history should know that religion of whatever creed is never successfully stamped out and never will be, either by Atheist Hitler or worse, Atheist Stalin.

I think that some of your correspondents are also basing their opinions on hearsay. The Spanish Republican Government was no more a Government elected by the people than that of Germany or Russia and Italy. Conversely, if your correspondents say that that statement is not correct, why rail against Hitler and Mussolini. Their elections were carried out in the same way.

I cannot understand "Anti-Moor." The Moors are members of the Spanish nation, just as much as our Sikhs, Gurkhas, King's African Rifles, and many others. Why should they not have a voice in the Government of their country, as all our colonials have?

No, as one who has travelled in many European countries, totalitarian states, republics and kingdoms, I can, without fear of true contradiction, tell your correspondents who have not had similar good fortune, that the cruellest form of dictatorship is that of the Republics, so cruel as not to compare with the stern discipline of Hitler and his like, and it is for such as these that Mr. Midgley desires our charity.

In a situation like the one in question, either complete abstention should be maintained or both sides should have the same claims on us. I suggest that it is better to leave the whole question of humanising this war to the hard common sense of the Imperial Prime Minister. If he is left to do his job, he will succeed in the task of seeing that the Government of Spain will in the future be that of the people's choice, without interference from other countries—Red or Nazi.—Yours, etc.

A LONDONER IN ULSTER.

WISHES ALDERMAN EVERY SUCCESS

Sir,—I have read with great interest Mr. Midgley's letter on behalf of the Spanish people, and his fair and honourable challenge to debate the Spanish question. He can rest assured that he has the support of every honest thinking man and woman who is free to think for themselves. I venture to say, if such a challenge is taken up, there is not a hall in Belfast large enough to accommodate his supporters. Mr. Midgley lost his seat in Parliament by having the courage of his convictions to speak out the truth on the war in Spain.

Once more comes the order from the Vatican, "Ye must support Franco, the man of God, born to lead the peope." His arch supporter, Mussolini, was blessed by the Pope when savagely murdering the helpless, unarmed Abyssinians. Though it is said he is an athiest, perhaps that did not matter so long as he was conquering another bit of territory for "The Church." In conclusion, I wish Alderman Midgley every success in his fight for truth and liberty—in Belfast and Madrid.—Yours, etc.,

"UNFETTERED."

SUNDAY CLOSING.

Sir,—A correspondence has been going on in your columns for some weeks on this topic. It began by a correspondent signing himself "Visitor," inquiring "Can any of your readers state why licensed houses are closed in Ulster on Sunday?" The reply is that such legislation has been in force for over half a century, and has been found to be of ever-increasing benefit. Two anonymous writers have written four letters, three of them by one person, protesting against this legislation, and on this powerful representation of public opinion Mr. Charles Lupane considers that "the time is now opportune for the repeal of that part of the 1923 Act dealing with Sunday closing." If such a thing were done, which is extremely improbable, it would not help these gentlemen very much. The Northern Government did not introduce Sunday closing. They only made a small extension of existing legislation to close public-houses in Belfast completely instead of permitting them to be open in the afternoon for three hours. A few facts may be worth consideration. The Irish Sunday Closing Act came into force in 1878. It enforced complete Sunday closing throughout Ireland, except in five exempted cities—Dublin, Belfast, Cork, Limerick and Waterford—where opening was permitted between two and seven. The success of the Bill was so great that in 1880 the Chief Secretary said:—"There can scarcely be any doubt that the Sunday Closing Act will be renewed by the Government that is in power." In 1887 a Select Committee was demanded by the opponents of the Bill. To their intense disappointment the committee not only did not recommend repeal, but extension, and also advocated earlier closing on Saturdays. In 1906 in the five exempted cities the hours of opening were reduced by two hours and closing hour on Saturday was 10 o'clock in all places with a population of over 5,000, and nine o'clock in all other cities and towns.

The Northern Government Act was introduced on May 11, 1923. On June 17 there was for the first time a dry Sunday in Belfast. On the following Monday there was not a single case of drunkenness in the police court, a state of things that had not been known for years. It will thus be seen that the Northern Government is not responsible for Sunday closing or early closing, but only for the complete closing of licensed houses in the city of Belfast. All other restrictions on the licensed trade have been in existence for over 50 years. A Royal Commission in 1889 reported on the great benefit resulting from Sunday closing in Wales. So great was this that in 1921 in accordance with a resolution of the Monmouthshire County Council, and with the support of local members of Parliament, the Welsh Sunday Closing Act was extended to include this county. Sunday closing is also enforced in Scotland and the Isle of Man. Thus in all the great tourist centres there are no licensed houses open on Sunday. Northern Ireland, so far from being an exception, only enforces legislation on the same lines as in the other great holiday resorts.—Yours, etc.,

TRAM FARE SUGGESTION.

Sir,—Could the Belfast Corporation not give the public three-half-penny fares on the trams? It is too bad to charge twopence from the City Centre to Cavehill Road. This should be a three-half-penny fare, and the same distance over the city in proportion. The penny and twopenny fares could remain as they are.

Three-half-penny fares would be a boon to the citizens, and I don't think the tram finance would suffer much, if any. This suggestion should be considered by the committee.—Yours, etc.,

"THREE-HALF-PENNY FARES."

CONSOLATION OF POETRY.

Sir,—You will perhaps be interested to know that the writer saw a lady to-day quietly crying. I asked her the reason, and she handed me a copy of your paper dated July 20, pointing to a few verses named "Example." This lady has just lost a sister of whom she was inordinately fond. My point in writing you is to point out that these verses brought solace and resignment to one in trouble; and in my opinion must have a potency for good, and worthy of being circulated as much as possible.—Yours, etc.

SOUTHPORT.

BELFAST TRAFFIC CONDITIONS.

HAS MANY FAULTS TO FIND.

CRITIC'S FOUR "WHYS."

Sir,—With the introduction of traffic lights now in the centre of the city one cannot say that there has been any considerable improvement in traffic conditions. Although it will obviously take some time before all these automatic arrangements are working to perfection, there is no doubt that motorists at present have many faults to find with the system.

Perhaps the Belfast Police Committee, or whatever other body is responsible for these luminous outrages, or some of your readers, could answer some of the following questions:—

(1) Why is there such a scarcity of filter arrows? For example, Donegall Street into York Street, High Street into Victoria Street, and Donegall Place into Chichester Street, are corners where the filter light would be advantageous and are lacking in this respect.

(2) Why are traffic lights mounted on a post in the middle of the road in front of the Albert Memorial? This leads to great confusion as to whether vehicles are to pass to the right or left of this post.

(3) Why should Belisha Beacons be set at points where there are traffic lights and also "Cross now" lights, as at North Street and Royal Avenue? When the lights change motorists are doubtful whether to proceed or whether to wait while pedestrians clear these crossings.

(4) Why is there a "Cross now" light in front of the school in Duncairn Gardens? This light is only plaything for children, who push the button and run away, and use the barricade on which to practise gymnastics, also the difficulty of slowing up on the sloping wooden blocks here on a wet day amounts to a very definite danger.

There are many other grievances under which Belfast motorists have to suffer on account of these new traffic regulations, but the above few will serve to point out some of the major deficiencies in the system.

Belfast motorists must stand up for their rights. There must be a limit put to the Powers or whoever is responsible for this plague of over-organisation. Immediate action should be taken, otherwise, in the course of a very short time, motorists in this city will have degenerated into something worse than a flock of sheep.—Yours, etc.,

"AMBER."

"VICTORIA THE GREAT."

Sir,—Might I through your paper throw out a hint to our local cinemas? I have had a number of requests from Southern Ireland loyalists to let them know should that great film, "Victoria the Great," make a re-appearance in Belfast. Last year many loyalists travelled from Southern Ireland to see the Coronation films and I feel sure that a re-appearance of "Victoria the Great," if only for one day, would be welcomed not only by Southern Ireland visitors but by many Belfast residents who were unable to see it during its previous appearances in Belfast. As you are aware, films of this type dare not be shown in Southern Ireland, the land of wonderful "toleration," about which we have been hearing so much lately.—Yours, etc.,

"BELFAST RESIDENT."

EX-SERVICEMEN'S WIVES.

Sir,—Will some of your readers please let me know is there any fund to assist the wives of ex-Servicemen to get dentures, especially when their husbands are unemployed and on the bureau and not able to pay for them? War widows can get assistance from the Red Cross Fund and surely there is some fund to help ex-Servicemen's wives.—Yours, etc.,

SHANKILL ROAD MISSION.

Sir,—We would esteem it a kindness if you would repeat the favour of former years and permit us to appeal in your columns for our summer work amongst poor children.

The Shankill Road Mission has exercised a ministry of sunshine for over 40 years. This summer has seen no diminution of our work. As will be seen by your advertisement columns, hundreds of children have already been our guests at the Fresh Air Colony in Bangor. There are still hundreds to be provided for, and we are concerned lest any poor child should be deprived of the joy of holiday. We are grateful for the help we have received in the past, and are confident that the friends of little children will support us in our present appeal. Contributions will be gratefully received and acknowledged by the undersigned:—

TRAFFIC TO SHORT & HARLAND'S.

Sir,—I wish to draw the attention of the Harbour Commissioners to the traffic to and from the Queen's Island and Short & Harland's. There does not seem to be any rule of the road, just a regular scramble, particularly on the Queen's, Sydenham and Hamilton roads. During the week on the Hamilton Road there were two accidents, one of them proving fatal. It is the opinion of quite a few that a white line on the centre of the last two roads mentioned above, plus a few offenders prosecuted, would soon cure this state of affairs.—Yours, etc.,

SCIENCE AND SPIRITUALISM.

Sir, — When lecturing under the auspices of the Belfast Spiritualists' Alliance, the speaker, as reported in your paper of 18th inst., referred to "the advances of the Theosophical Society, Christian Science, and Spiritualism." His kindly reference to Christian Science is gratefully acknowledged; but it is neccessary, in order to remove any possible misunderstanding, that I should be allowed to state quite definitely that Christian Science has no connection whatsoever with either Theosophy or Spiritualism.—Yours, etc.,

LADIES' BOWLS AT CAVEHILL

CALEDONIAN PAIR BEATEN.

At Cavehill Bowling Green last evening Mrs. Robertson and Mrs. M'Donald, ladies accompanying the Caledonian team, were defeated in a pairs competition by Mrs. D. Watson and Miss Mundell, representing Cavehill, the score being 23 to 2.

A rink match between teams representing Divis and Shaftesbury and Cavehill was won by the former by 16 to 15.

The rinks were:—Cavehill—T. Mundell, Jas. Gibson, W. Clarke, W. Irvine. Divis and Shaftesbury—H. M'Cutcheon (Divis), J. M'Pherson, jun. (Shaftesbury), Walter Scott (Shaftesbury), Jack M'Kenna (Divis).

INTERNATIONAL CYCLING.

BRITISH REPRESENTATIVES.

Dennis S. Horn (Polytechnic C.C.), British sprint champion, and W. W. Maxfield (Kentish Wheelers), 25 miles champion, have been chosen by the National Cyclists' Union to represent Great Britain in the sprint race in the World Championships at Amsterdam on August 27 and 28.

Britain's team for the road race, to be held in Holland over a distance of approximately 106 miles on September 3, will be J. G. Bone (Glasgow Wheelers), I. Fancourt (Yorkshire R.C.), Jack Holmes (Yorkshire R.C.), and R. C. Jones (Wolverhampton Wheelers).

Holmes is the National Massed Start champion.

The sprint championship will be decided on the track used for the Olympic Games of 1928.

OUR SPELLING BEE.

HEALTH INSURANCE STAFF PASS ON.

HAD 16 OF 18 WORDS RIGHT.

TWO THEY BROKE DOWN ON.

"The best yet" was the general opinion expressed by the people attending the spelling bee, under the auspices of the "Belfast Telegraph," at the Classic Cinema on Friday night when Civil Service ousted Imperial Chemical Industries from the competition and qualified to meet the Staff on the Northern Ireland District Command (Victoria Barracks) in the semi-final on Wednesday next.

Civil Service, a team which was drawn solely from the National Health Insurance Department, created a record by spelling sixteen of the eighteen words asked while the losers were correct in fourteen words.

Actually the winners had the first fourteen words correct, their only subsequent failures being tintinnabulation and parricide. They are a wonderful combination and succeeded with such jaw-breakers as etherial or ethereal, gymkhana, paraphernalia, rucksack, dishevelled, sprocket, puisne (pronounced puny), coruscate, corroborate, lustrine, troubadour, nicene, niece, collaborate, the "feminine" word lingerie and supervacaneous as "a binder."

As it was they only just failed with tintinnabulation, missing out one of the vital N's. It means, incidentally, tinkling of bells or as the umpire pointed out "perhaps gongs." Despite the fact that the Civil Service team consisted solely of males they were albe to overcome lingerie which the audience were told were also known as unmentionables.

FELL TO FUCHSIA.

I.C.I. surmounted ingratiate but fell at the second word fuchsia. They had six correct all in a row, the words being excruciate, dyeing, sedentary, razzle-dazzle, precipitous, and the catchy word mantelpiece. Extravaganza was, however, too much for one of the ladies on the I.C.I. team but the competitor following rose to the occasion and spelt lamppost correctly. Satiety was overcome and the competitor who spelled nonchalance was quite nonchalant about it.

When the next competitor was asked to spell harpsichord he replied that he had never played one and there was a quick retort from the umpire that at all events he might play one in Heaven. A young lady was asked to spell moustache and succeeded but lilliputian proved a stumbling block. There was an "L" of a difference.

The audience got a laugh when another I.C.I. member made three gallant attempts to spell pekinese. Laughter from the audience warned him that py was hardly the correct start to make. He then went off at a tangent and started with pi but the audience could not suppress a laugh and ultimately he got the word correctly. I.C.I. earned a round of applause for their spelling of zymotic which, incidentally, was not alone the last word on the list but the last word in the Oxford dictionary.

There was an ovation for the competitor who spelled lamppost correctly the definition being, among other things, something which is useful to hold on to at times.

Then coruscate, meaning sparkle, was likened to the smile which would be on the face of the competitor successful. The smile was there.

The winners were represented by Messrs. R. W. Steele, H. A. Lowry, E. H. Jones, E. S. Henshaw, R. S. Rogers, and R. H. Wright, while I.C.I. "fielded" the following team—Miss W. H. Smith, Miss M. M'Aleish, Messrs. C. H. Bigg, E. R. Willing-Denton, P. R. Elmcre and S. H. Casson.

THE SEMI-FINALISTS.

Civil Service, who are the challengers, have thus qualified to meet the Staff Northern Ireland District Command (Victoria Barracks) in the semi-final next Wednesday.

The other semi-finalists are Millisle Young Farmers' Club v. Belfast Corporation Officials, who meet on Tuesday.

Mr. T. H. MacDermott said the teams had looked on the competition in a philosophical way. The "war cry" of I.C.I. was, "How could man die better than facing fearful odds," while Civil Service were of opinion they were being "butchered to make a Roman holiday."

The attendance at the Classic was up to expectations and there is evidently a desire on the part of the public to hear spelling bees.

YACHTING AT HOLYWOOD.

FRIDAY EVENING'S RACES.

Three yacht races were held at Holywood on Friday evening. Mr. E. Graham was the officer of the day, and was assisted by Messrs. J. Mann and R. Brennan. The wind was s.s.e., making the course a run, reach and beat. Details:—

Handicap Class (Kelly Cup)—1, Inca (H. Shannon, jun.), start 7-35, finish 8-48-45; 2, Merrymaid 1. (J. W. Wonnacott), 8-51-44; 3, Windhover (W. J. Nelson) 9-3-45.

Maiden Class (Vice-Captain's Cup)—1, Cyrena (N. M'Arthur), start 7-40, finish 8-58-16; 2 Env. (J. Close), 9-1-43; 3, Elizabeth (G. M'Kimm), 9-6-18; others in order, Ellen (W. M'Kimm), 9-7-40; Rosina (D. and J. Stanbury), 9-18-47.

Sharpie Class (Donnan Cup)—1, Tempest (S. Stevenson), start 7-45, finish 8-59-55; 2, Cloud (J. Weir), 9-0-55; 3, Mist (A. Neeson), 9-50; 4, Cyclone (G. Laing), 9-10-10; others in order, Spindrift (F. W. Steen), 9-14-48, Crest (G. R. Bonner), 8-18-20; Ripple (C. Crichton and J. Mann), 9-22-53. Spray (D. Cosgrove), Coral (J. W. Graham and R. Weir), and Squall (R. M'Master), gave up. Kelpie (M. M'Kenna) was disqualified.

CHURCH LADS' BRIGADE.

ENJOYABLE CAMP AT BANGOR.

Excellent weather conditions favoured sports day in connection with the Church Lads' Brigade Training Corps camp at Ballymaconnell, Bangor. Upwards of 80 lads are in camp, the officer commanding being Captain E. Mitchell (Seagoe Company). The sports events were run off under the direction of Lieutenant Crone (Lambeg Jubilee Company), sports officer. Results:—

75 yards (boys under 10 years)—1, John Watson (Armagh); 2, T. Maconachy (St. Simons).

100 yards boys (open)—1, V. M'Nabney (Armagh); 2, T. Marks (Broomhedge).

Three-Legged race—1, T. Marks and W. Hayes (Broomhedge).

Blindfold race—1, A. Foster (Omagh); 2, A. Matson (Armagh).

V.C. race—1, A. Walker and W. Marks (Broomhedge).

Wheelbarrow race—1, A. Walker and W. Marks (Broomhedge).

Officers' race—1, Lieut. E. A. Brooks (St. Elizabeth's); 2, Captain W. Ewart (Armagh) and Captain Mitchell (Seagoe) dead-heat.

Staff Orderlies race—1, R. Hanna (Lambeg); 2, J. Matheison (Lambeg).

Ladies' race—1, Mrs. Lutton (Seagoe); 2, Miss M. Harvey (Belfast).

A large number of the lads' parents and other visitors were present.

The prizes were distributed by Mrs. Ruddock, wife of the rector of Broomhedge.

The camp site is an excellent one, situated in nice open country within easy reach of the sea, and daily bathing parades are well attended. Thanks to the Belfast Battalion of the Boys' Brigade each tent is equipped with tent boards.

On Thursday afternoon a football match took place between the camp team and one picked from the neighbouring camp of Scottish Cadets. The match ended in a draw of four goals each, and the team and officers were entertained by the Scotsmen.

The good weather all the week has made the camp a most enjoyable one. The cooking arrangements are in the capable hands of Drummer R. Lavery, late of St. Michael's Company. The canteen is under the management of Cadet J. Clarke, late of Christ Church Company, Lisburn.

Amongst the other officers in camp are:—Lieutenant E. Maze (Broomhedge), quartermaster; Captain Rev. R. C. Ellis (Dunmurry), chaplain, and Lieutenant Cummings (Armagh), adjutant.

BRYN JONES NOT YET SIGNED.

Bryn Jones, the Welsh international inside-forward, for whose transfer from Wolverhampton Wanderers to Arsenal arrangements have been completed, has not yet signed the contract, it was stated at Arsenal Stadium to-day.

SECRETS INQUIRY.

INTERIM REPORT IS POSSIBLE.

AIR DEFENCE CRITICISMS.

PREMIER IN FOREIGN DEBATE.

Drama, which has been abundant in this session of Parliament, may continue until the House rises next Friday, for the summer recess, writes the P.A. Lobby Correspondent. It is possible that almost at the eleventh hour, just before members hurry away for the holidays, an interim report of the Select Committee inquiring into the official secrets situation may be rushed through the printing presses—and published. For on Thursday the committee—which has been working until nearly midnight in the privacy of a committee room—will meet again. Future procedure will then be discussed, but there may also be discussion on the draft interim report, which Sir John Gilmour, the chairman, is understood to be drawing up. Presumably such an interim report would deal only with the first half of the committee's work—the investigation of the original statement by Mr. Duncan Sandys on what occurred when he put down a question containing secret information, and the action then taken by the Ministers concerned.

All the deliberations of the Select Committee are, of course, strictly secret, and nothing is disclosed until their report is made to the House. But the prevailing "atmosphere" in Government circles is not one of apprehension as to what the committee may report. There is at present no feeling that the session is going to end with a serious "crisis" for the Administration. Doubts are felt as to whether—if there is an interim report next week—an opportunity can be found to debate it in the House this session.

Business on Thursday—when health matters come up—might in an emergency be rearranged, but it seems unlikely that an interim report would be discussed in the adjournment debate on Friday, as the Opposition would probably consider this was rushing things too much.

DEFICIENCY CHARGES.

Another private meeting, at which highly important things would be reviewed, may be arranged in the seclusion of the Prime Minister's Room next week.

Mr. Chamberlain may invite Mr. Attlee, Mr. Arthur Greenwood, and Dr. Hugh Dalton, so that he can give them the Government's answer to the Labour memorandum alleging various deficiencies in our air defences. If this conference is held, Sir Kingsley Wood, the Air Minister, will no doubt attend.

Although the Labour allegations have never been published, it is gathered that they maintain that the British Air Force is not expanding so rapidly as some others, that squadrons are not properly equipped, that guns are in arrears, that there has been "friction" at the Air Ministry, and that in some respects there are far too many "types of instruments." Criticisms are also levelled, it is understood, at the balloon barrage and air raid precaution activities.

In reply to all this the Prime Minister may have something to say, among other things, about the arrangements for obtaining machines from the Dominions, the return of Lord Nuffield, and the valuable work Mr. Geoffrey Lloyd is doing in his new sphere as head of A.R.P. The Government's reply to the charges may be set out in a memorandum.

The last of the long series of debates this session on foreign affairs will be on Tuesday, when the Foreign Office Vote comes up

This is a Liberal "Supply" day. Sir Archibald Sinclair, Mr. Richard Acland, and Mr Kingsley Griffith will raise (1) the prospects of the British plan for withdrawing foreign volunteers from Spain; (2) the delicate situation in Czecho-Slovakia, and (3) events in China; Mr. Morgan Jones speaks for Labour. Miss Megan Lloyd George has decided not to speak, but Mr. Lloyd George may take part.

Probably a reassuring note will be struck by the Prime Minister and Mr. R. A. Butler, whose speeches may take a cautiously optimistic view of the immediate future.

LOCKER-LAMPSON "GESTURE."

A new motion has been put down by Commander Locker-Lampson. It reads: —"That this House condemns the forcible liquidation of friendless minorities in Austria, protests in particular against the incitement on the radio to victims to commit suicide, and fears that official silence on so serious an issue may be misinterpreted."

There will be no time for discussion on this motion, but it has been put down as a "gesture"

Foreign affairs will also occupy the House of Lords On Tuesday Lord Davies will ask the Government to issue as a White Paper an explanatory statement relating to the defensive agreement recently concluded between Britain and France. He will urge that the British Government do its utmost to secure the extension of the agreement, to bring within its scope all those nations who are prepared to pool their military resources in a collective force for their common defence, and to settle disputes by recourse to impartial third party judgment.

Viscount Elibank will on Wednesday deal with the very serious state of British interests in China resulting from the war. The Bishop of Chichester will raise international problems created by the plight of refugees, and ask about the Evian Conference and the policy of the Government, and Lord Snell will ask for a Government statement on the foreign relations of this country.

Lord Horder is sure of an interested audience on Tuesday when he will "call attention to the enormous growth in the quack medicine trade, and to the incongruity of exercising no control over the deleterious effects of such trade upon health at a time when a serious effort is being made to improve national fitness."

Happily Mr. Elliot (Minister of Health) is fairly well pleased with the picture of the nation's health which he will be able to paint on Thursday. The physical training scheme will be referred to by Mr. Greenwood, Mr. Geoffrey Mander, Mr. F. Marshall and others.

Safety in mines problems, in view of the distressing number of explosions and accidents, will be pressed on Monday on the Mines Department Vote by Mr. David Grenfell and Mr. Tom Williams. A Royal Commission has the matter in hand.

EXPORT COAL TRADE.

Captain Crookshank, the Minister for Mines, will on Monday or Tuesday announce the Government's attitude on the urgent question of assisting the export coal trade such as by levy on each ton in order to form a "pool," from which subsidies could be paid. At present in Germany subsidies can raise as high as 10s a ton, it is said. One theory is that assistance could be most usefully given towards recovering our French market, in which, rather curiously, Germany is reported to have been making progress.

An agreement over prices and markets with Germany on coal, if it could be obtained, would be interwoven with the bigger question of a general settlement.

The Speaker has agreed to receive the guests at a tea-party which Colonel H. L. Nathan is giving on the Terrace on Wednesday to the Foreign Press Association, the London correspondents from various countries.

That night factory administration and industrial diseases will be discussed on the Consolidated Fund Bill. Sir Samuel Hoare (Home Secretary) and Mr. Geoffrey Lloyd will be Government spokesmen, with Mr. Rhys Davies and Mr. Will John for Labour.

Refugee problems will be raised by Labour in the adjournment debate on Friday, and Mr. Mander is dealing with National Parks on Thursday.

During the week outstanding votes will come up at 10 p.m. and be passed without discussion. Labour will break with a tradition of 32 years' standing and abstain from voting on these, as they consider it is a waste of time to call continuous divisions when their attitude is well known. But 20 Liberals have decided to vote against the Government on the Foreign Office, Board of Trade and Ministry of Labour votes.

HOLIDAY PLANS.

Holiday plahs are already being much discussed. Two members—Mr. Ben Smith and Mr. Geoffrey Mander—will pay visits to Czecho-Slovakia and see the position there at first hand. Sir Henry Page-Croft is heading the delegation to British Columbia to examine settlement possibilities. Mr. Attlee is going with his family to North Wales, and Dr. Dalton and Mr. Herbert Morrison will see the Empire Exhibition at Glasgow.

Dr. Dalton has provided the week's best joke. "When I was in New South Wales recently," he relates, "the Speaker there told me that he never allows supplementary questions in his Parliament, and sometimes he has had to order Ministers to discontinue and sit down—on the ground that they were abusing and provoking the Labour Opposition."

SUMMER HANDICAP AT CELTIC PARK.

THREE HEATS RUN OFF.

THRILL IN FIRST SEMI-FINAL.

The Celtic meeting of Friday evening opened on a thrilling note, with Harley Countess short-heading Meadow Grove, hot favourite, to win the Summer Handicap, in the first semi-final.

Beaten for position in the run round the first turn, Meadow Grove caught the field at the top turn, and his jubilant backers were beginning to shout him home, failing to reckon with the courage of the bitch, who at this stage held an advantage of perhaps half a yard.

Battling it out in the gamest measure imaginable Harley Countess just stayed on to gain the narrowest of verdicts in 31.97.

For part of the race for the second semi-final it began to look as if there was to be a further turn-up, Kernaghan's Cutlet—7 to 4 on—taking a long while to get through his field.

In order to do so he had to put in some stout racing, almost having to batter his way to the fore in the race round the top bend.

Once he showed clear of his field the Ballyclare dog took a lead of three lengths. Yet passing the judge he had only half this margin to spare Fancy Molly finishing much the faster of the pair.

There was another keen finish in the third semi-final, Tobershiel Woodside, co-favourite with Druckendult Hero, being short-headed on the line by Fancy Molly after a terrific duel between the pair from 100 yards out.

Won by 1½ lengths; 1 length. Time, 30.61 secs.

BENNY LYNCH AND THE FUTURE.

BOARD RULING SEQUEL.

"IMPOSSIBLE CONDITIONS."

SAYS HE IS GOING TO AMERICA.

Benny Lynch, who was deprived of the world flyweight championship and other titles by the British Boxing Board of Control, will never again fight as a flyweight. Instead he is proposing to go to America and battle his way to the world's bantamweight championship.

In an interview yesterday in the camp at Trench Point, near Campbeltown, where he is on holiday, Lynch stated that he had definitely made up his mind not to pay the fine imposed on him by the Board of Control.

The condition imposed by the Board that his training camp should be always open to inspection by a representative of the Board, and that the financial arrangements should be under the supervision of the Board, he described as "impossible."

Lynch, who is suffering from a heavy cold in the head, was confined all day to his tent.

"The Board of Control," he said, "are driving me to America. I have no kick coming against them for taking away my titles. I could not make the weight to defend my championship, and I recognise it is only just that I should lose the titles, but I maintain that the Board should not have imposed such a terrific money penalty on me when I had honestly done everything possible to make the weight.

PROBLEMS OF A CHAMPION.

"It is true that I have been making big money, but people do not realise what a champion boxer has to spend to defend his title. I have a wife and two children to keep now, and I simply can't take the risk of making myself liable to the financial penalties which the Board might impose on me if I failed to make the weight under the agreement they want me to sign.

"I have been warned that I would be taking grave risks if I tried to make flyweight again. It's not natural for a man of my build. All this sweating and Turkish baths pull a man down.

"They call me 'temperamental.' I wonder what the nerves of some people who criticise me would be like if they were doing the kind of physical exercises a boxer has to do, with all the sweating and massaging, and all on a starvation diet.

"Anyhow, I am finished with all that. I am naturally a bantam-weight, and in future it is as a bantam-weight that I will fight."

Lynch explained that while he had decided on the broad lines of his policy he had not yet considered any detail.

"I don't know whether or not I shall accept the offer to fight Joe Roche at bantamweight in San Francisco," he continued. "There are all sorts of preliminaries to be considered first—getting an American boxing licence, for instance, though I don't anticipate any difficulties in that direction. My ultimate ambition is to challenge Escobar, the holder, for the world's bantamweight title."

GALENTO FIGHTING FOR LIFE.

ORANGE, New Jersey, Saturday.—"Two-ton" Tony Galento, the picturesque heavyweight publican, who trains for his fights on beer, has been taken to hospital here seriously ill with pneumonia.

He now lies battling for life in an oxygen tent in the Orange Memorial Hospital with a temperature of 104 degrees.

Early this morning the Press Association was informed that Tony's condition was "fair." He protested volubly when the oxygen tent was placed over his head. "What's this," he said. "Take it off. Take it away. I'm not that sick."

Galento, who in a recent American ranking list was placed second to Joe Louis among the world's heavyweights, was to have fought a non-title bout against John Henry Lewis, the coloured light-heavyweight champion of the world, at the Municipal Stadium, Philadelphia, next Tuesday. The match has been indefinitely postponed.

Only a few hours before he was stricken down with illness, Galento had been vowing jubilantly that he would "scare" Lewis out of the ring with his newly-developed blood-curling cry if he failed to beat him with his fists.—Press Association Foreign Special.

NEWTOWNARDS BOXING TOURNEY.

The initial tournament staged by Ards F.C. promotions at Castlereagh Park, on Friday evening, did not receive the support anticipated. Local people certainly turned up, but the district boxing fans disappointed the organisers.

Mr. H. Hanley was the matchmaker, while Messrs. W. Knight and W. Gilmore were referees. The timekeepers were Messrs. Hugh M'Alevey and J. Hinds, jun., the latter also acting as M.C.

Ginger Walsh and Barney Wilson, two Belfast lightweights, who recently fought a draw, supplied the opening bout. It was full of life from beginning to end. Wilson was the more impressive boxer and Walsh was down for a count of six in the third round, but the latter rallied strongly. Wilson was a clear winner on points

Chuck Flanagan, Belfast, failed to appear in opposition to Jackie Campbell, Belfast, in a 10-round featherweight bout. George Lang, Glasgow, was a game substitute, but his whirlwind tactics failed to upset Campbell, who won by a knock-out in the fourth round.

The chief contest, a ten-rounder at catchweights, between Jack M'Knight, Ulster middleweight champion, and Tommy Henderson, Scots cruiserweight champion, ended in a points decision for M'Knight, who was too speedy for his rival and very smart in countering the other's attacks.

Jock M'Cusker, Glasgow, raised the only winning flag for Scotland, outpointing Ginger Leckey (Belfast) over ten rounds. This welterweight fight proved the best bout of the evening.

A six-rounds welterweight test between Jackie Fields (Bangor) and Jackie Keenan (Belfast), ended in the second heat, the bout being stopped in favour of the Bangorian.

Cecil Creighton and Rab M'Gregor contributed an entertaining display.

DON'T LET HIM FOOL YOU!

The man who tries to give you a substitute for "Sandeman" Port is not doing it for your good. For 148 years Sandeman has been the "hall-mark" of quality. You want the best, so call firmly for Sandeman. Don't be put off; insist on getting Sandeman Port.

London Diary of an Ulsterwoman

THE visit of the King and Queen to Paris has been, as was anticipated, a huge The impression created by the Queen's charm reminded me of [illegible] she and the King paid to Ulster [illegible] summer. There, as in Paris, the [illegible] was personally unknown; people [illegible] what she was like. Now they [illegible] for what she is, full of charm. [illegible] in Paris, as in Belfast, the [illegible] spoke of her smile, of her [illegible], of her obvious pleasure at the reception she was receiving. The [illegible] the Queen brought with her were [illegible] by a British house, and some [illegible] inspired by the desire to show the [illegible] between England and France. [illegible] were in Pompadour style, and [illegible] showed clearly the influence of the Napoleonic period.

MRS. OGILVIE

[illegible] people—and they are many—who like to feel that behind every successful man is a woman, are glad to know that behind the new head of the [illegible] is his very delightful wife. Belfast and Northern Ireland know Mrs. Ogilvie well, but on this side of the water [illegible] like Professor Ogilvie, comparatively a stranger. That they will both [illegible] make a host of friends no one who knows anything of their career in [illegible] will doubt. Both are very brilliant. Mrs. Ogilvie was a student of her husband's at Oxford, and she has helped [illegible] a considerable extent in his academic work. Both are children of the Manse. Here is wishing them every happiness and success in their new sphere of activities.

The women graduates of Queen's have an association with the important Open Door International Conference which opens at Girton College, Cambridge, on Monday. This body looks after the economic interests of women in practically every part of the world. Fifteen countries will be represented. The British Federation of University Women and the International Federation of University Women, to which the Queen's Women Graduates' Association is affiliated, are sending representatives. The importance of the conference can be gauged to some extent by the number of countries taking a direct interest in it through various women's organisations, and also by the fact that three countries, Great Britain, Sweden and South Africa, have seen fit to send official Government observers.

Schemes to repel what they call the various encroachments on the liberty of women in some industries and professions will be considered at the conference. Most of the office-bearers and delegates are women who have had distinguished academic and professional careeers, and who have played an important part in national and international affairs.

MARRIED COUPLES.

Miss Christina Foyle, a young woman with Irish blood in her veins, certainly has a great talent for thinking out unusual ideas for her literary lunches. For the luncheon on Monday famous married people will tell the guests some of their experiences. Among those who will talk—how much or how little it is difficult to forecast—are the Rt. Hon. F. W. Pethick-Lawrence and his wife, whose work on behalf of women's causes is so well known; Mr. Frank Lawton, who created the part of Young Woodley, and his very beautiful actress wife, Evelyn Laye; the artists, Mr. Jan Gordon and Mrs. Cora Gordon, also Mr. Claude Hulbert and Miss Enid Trevor. In the chair will be Mr. Cosmo Hamilton.

Lady Londonderry gave a brilliant dinner dance at Londonderry House for her daughter, Lady Mary Stewart, her niece, Miss Helen Hoare, and Miss Elizabeth Leveson-Gower, niece of the Duke of Sutherland. Had the plans of the King and Queen not been affected by the death of the Queen's mother, they would have been at the dance. It was the occasion for the gathering of some very interesting people to this famous Park Lane home. There were Prince Frederick of Prussia, Herr Fritz von Falkenhayn, son of the German general, and Admiral Horthy, son of the Regent of Hungary.

AT LONDONDERRY HOUSE.

At Londonderry House, Princess Alice Countess of Athlone, and the Earl of Athlone were at dinner before the dance and remained the greater part of the evening, as did also Lady Patricia Ramsay and Mrs. Neville Chamberlain. The hostess wore a black tulle gown, a large diamond tiara, and diamond ornaments. Lady Mary's dress of white lace had a silver sash, and her cousin, Miss Helen Hoare, wore a coral pink tulle frock with bands of beaded embroidery in a darker shade. Miss Vivien Kenyon-Slaney, the Duchess of Abercorn's grand-daughter, was another of the young guests also in white. Flowers from Mount Stewart had been sent over to decorate the rooms.

Priscilla Countess Annesley is amongst those whose assistance can usually be assured on committees to raise funds for worthy causes. In one of the loveliest homes of London, that of Mrs. James Field, the racehorse owner, she met Lady Haddington and Mrs. Warren Pearl a few days ago to discuss the arrangements for the ball in aid of the Docklands Settlements. This is one of the causes which Princess Helena Victoria espouses. Although the ball is not until November, they feel it is a good thing to have all the arrangements worked out as far as possible in advance.

Sunshine or cloud—they bought Summer Hats and mean to wear them

OF DEBUTANTE AGE

By YVONNE

MOST girls find the transition from school frocks to the more feminine and smarter clothes which they have as soon as they leave school, quite a thrilling prospect. And so it should be, especially if the new "semi-grown-up" clothes are chosen wisely and carefully by a clothes-conscious mother.

When, however, the clothes are being selected, the general appearance of the girl herself should be kept constantly in mind. All the freshness and charm of her youth should be intensified by her clothes, but at the same time it should be remembered that nearly all young girls have figure faults which are generally corrected later on as she grows older.

Is She Gawky?

She may be a little too fat around the "tummy," or her arms may be a little thick. On the other hand some girls of seventeen or even eighteen are still a trifle "leggy" and are apt to look rather gawky. All these figure faults, which are so often adjusted later, are apt to cause quite a lot of unnecessary mental anguish to the girl herself unless they are treated tactfully by her mother.

These faults may easily be disguised by cleverly cut clothes, and the greatest care should be taken to see that they fit really well. Pleats, yokes, and slightly gathered bodices, with neat collars help to disguise a too-full figure, while the bloused bodices and gathered skirts, with corselet waistlines give softness to an angular one.

There are some very attractive, youthful looking colour schemes this year which are ideal for the girl who has a good skin. Light green and soft pink are charming colours for girls, while a suit in mustard yellow, thin knitted woollen fabric, worn with a high-necked brown lawn blouse looks delightful.

Bolero En Suite.

The sleeves of jackets should be smooth and long, and not exaggerated in any way. Little bolero jackets with sleeves are smart worn over matching dresses, having neatly fitted waistlines. The sunray pleated skirt with bolero jacket to match, worn with a lawn blouse with a round collar turned out over the bolero makes a very useful and smart ensemble for the young girl.

Striped flannel dresses or dresses made of somewhat similar fabric, light in weight and in attractive colourings, are just the thing for young girls. They are cut all in one, with a few pleats to widen the skirt, a dart or tucked bodice, short plain sleeves and a small round turned-down collar of linen.

Some of the nicest linen frocks are trimmed with drawn-thread work this season, and have short straight sleeves and stitched pleated skirts.

Small Design Is Best.

Printed fabrics should show small neat designs rather than large, sprawling patterns. Dresses of these flowered fabrics look well under plain dark coats with a single button fastening.

For evening wear this season, there's probably nothing nicer for the young girl than dresses made of some of the dainty cotton fabrics.

Ground-length dresses with neat bodices, little sleeves and full-gored skirts are almost always becoming. They may be made of fine pique, dotted muslin or embroidered organdie, trimmed simply with a coloured waistbelt or a posy of flowers according to whichever style suits the wearer best.

SAFETY FIRST

BY KINDERGARTEN

YEAR by year our roads become more and more congested with traffic and more dangerous for the children. There is no doubt that much has been accomplished in the way of making the roads safer for pedestrians.

Children cannot be judged from the adult standard. They cannot be depended upon. This is what makes them so difficult to deal with on the road. They act on impulse, without thought.

A child suddenly sees his friend on the other side of the road. He wants to join him, so without any warning he leaves the footpath and races to the opposite side of the street. If there is not much traffic about he may get across safely.

If, as often happens, there is a stream of traffic on the road, we read in the evening newspaper that "a little boy, aged —— years, was knocked down to-day on the —— Road and received fatal injuries." Worse still, we may read that he was not killed, but was maimed or crippled in some horrible way. That little boy may belong to anyone. A child is not dependable. He lives in the present, for the passing moment.

Of course local authorities have done much to reduce the number of accidents to children in various ways, such as stationing policemen outside schools and playgrounds at certain hours, when many children will wish to cross the street.

Nevertheless, there are bound to be occasions when the children will have to cross the street alone. What are you doing to ensure their safety? Are they acquiring road sense? Some schools, I believe, now teach the children how to act in the street and how to obey traffic signals.

But a great many schools do not. At any rate, the child's parents must help him in every way to act rationally in the street.

The child should always be accustomed to observe the traffic signals. In this way such observance becomes automatic. In the first instance the young child is accompanied by his parents. If they do all the thinking and the child merely walks unthinkingly with them, secure in their judgment, he is learning nothing.

Worse still, he is learning to be slack! The child should be encouraged to take notice of the signals, to say when to cross, etc. All this, done under adult supervision, helps to form good road habits.

Another, and a very pleasant way of acquiring road sense is to buy one of those delightful miniature sets of road signals, Belisha beacons, traffic lights, all complete. Let the children play with these and learn through playing.

The State is doing its best to reduce the number of road deaths. Won't you help, too? Surely no effort is too great to ensure the safety of your child?

To-day's Dinner Table.

Organdie is a delightful fabric for "dressing" summer dining tables. It looks particularly dainty and cool when chosen in a delicate colour and trimmed with white.

Pale blue organdie mats may be trimmed with a white lawn applique design making curlicues around the edge. Lettuce leaf green organdie is equally attractive embroidered with white daisies—the flowers themselves, again, being in the form of applique work.

Ecru-coloured organdie mats look pretty with edges finely scalloped in white, and having an all-over design of little white flower-heads scattered over it.

Asparagus En Beurre.

Now that asparagus is well in season we like to make the most of it by cooking it in various different ways. Here is an excellent method of cooking the tips:—

Break off a large breakfast-cupful of the tips and boil them in salted water gently until tender. Drain thoroughly.

Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter in a pan, put in the tips for a few minutes together with a little chopped parsley. Add salt and sugar, press through a sieve, put it in a clean stewpan with some thin cream and warm through again.

Thinking Ahead.

Now is the time to see that less washable bedclothes are clean and fresh for autumn nights. Down quilts which are delicate as to fabric and colour may need to be sent to the cleaners, but it is possible to wash the less vulnerable ones yourselves at home

The quilt should be shaken out, and then a bath of warm water, good soap flakes, and a little ammonia should be prepared and the quilt allowed to soak in it for twenty minutes.

Now swish it about gently in the water and, if very dirty, the whole process should be repeated. Rinse in several waters, to which a little ammonia has been added, squeeze gently and dry in the open air, shaking it occasionally.

Milk for the Hands.

The Queen of Sheba and Cleopatra, famous beauties of the past, used as the basis of their beauty treatment, so we are told, milk. It is still considered an excellent soother and softener of the skin. This week condensed milk was brought to my notice as being excellent for hand-beauty treatment. To counteract the roughness and coarseness caused by salt water and the wind, rub this milk into the skin of the hands. Massage the fingers from the tips to the palms. It is a good idea to wear loose-fitting white cotton gloves while sleeping.

WRECK BEAUTY CONTEST.

HAIR PULLED: COSTUMES TORN.

BELGRADE, Saturday.—The annual beauty competition at Tsikvenitsa (Yugo-Slavia) came to an unexpected end this year with a pitched battle in which both competitors and judges took part.

The trouble began with the judges, each of whom fancied a different "Miss Tsikvenitsa." Voices were raised, chairs began to fly, and a general melee ensued in which, it is stated, fists, feet, teeth and fruit were employed.

Seeing no hope of a verdict from the judges the competitors decided to join in the fight. They began pulling one another's hair and tearing bathing costumes—until some of the spectators intervened and restored order.

The competition was abandoned.—Reuter.

QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY

APPEAL TO FERMANAGH

FOR INCREASED SUPPORT.

An appeal for increased financial support was made by Queen's University to the Fermanagh County Council which met in Enniskillen on Friday. Rt. Hon. Sir Basil Brooke, Bart., M.P., presided.

In a letter to the Council, Mr. F. W. Ogilvie said the Fermanagh County Council contributed £120 towards their total revenue of £7,820, and the University was deeply conscious of these County Council grants which had become an integral part of their finances.

Having quoted some figures which went to show that the revenue of Queen's was considerably less than half the income of other British universities of its size and age, Mr. Ogilvie went on to say that it was obvious no amount of enthusiasm or ingenuity could overcome the very serious financial handicap from which Ulster students suffer, in provision for teaching, equipment, and research, in comparison with their fellow students in Great Britain.

Mr. H. J. D. Moffitt, J.P. (secretary), said the County Council paid £10 per student who attended the University from that County. Last year there were fifteen Fermanagh students at the University and the County Council paid £150. The average contribution for the past five years had been £140. In 1927 only £120 was contributed.

The Chairman asked would it be possible to make an increase per head or a block increase.

Mr. W. F. Dewane said it was a great thing to have such a university in the city and suggested that the application be referred to the Finance Committee.

Mrs. R. O. Hermon, J.P., moved a substantial increase be voted and spoke of the great advantages which the University offered to the people of the county.

There was no seconder for this proposal, and on the motion of Mr. Dewane, seconded by Mr. J. J. Coalter, J.P., it was unanimously decided to refer the matter to the Finance Committee.

DOWN MAN'S APPOINTMENT.

Mr. W. Campbell, assistant to Mr. S. Cochrane, Downpatrick, for many years, has been appointed petty sessions clerk for Portaferry-Greyabbey district, as from next January, in succession to Mr. H. S. Neely, promoted to the Larne district.

GERMAN ANTI-JEW SILLINESS.

SALZBURG IS "ALL ARYAN."

FAMOUS CONDUCTORS ARE MISSING

SALZBURG, Saturday.—Thoroughly "Germanised," the first all-Aryan Salzburg music festival is being inaugurated to-day by Dr. Gobbels, Reich Minister of Propaganda and Enlightenment.

According to an official spokesman, the festival has hitherto been "a Jewish instrument of anti-German ideology played for a Jewish public and Jewish Press."

In former years Salzburg has been a babel; this year, however, few foreigners are to be seen.

Every effort has been made to remove traces of the "Jewish influence" of Professor Max Reinhardt.

Hugo von Hofmannsthal's morality play "Everyman," which Dr. Reinhardt has produced every year since the festival was instituted in 1920, is no longer being given. The author is alleged to have been a half Jew.

In addition to Reinhardt and Hofmannsthal, the name of Signor Arturo Toscanini has also disappeared, since this famous conductor, who has formerly been seen here almost every year, is alleged to be a "supporter of Jews and Bolshevists."

Herr Bruno Walter, director of the Vienna opera until last March, is another familiar figure who is missing.

The conductors for the operas this year are Herr Wilhelm Furtwaengler, of the Berlin opera, and Herr Hans Knapperbusch, of the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra. There is only one foreign guest conductor, the Italian Vittorio Gui, who will conduct Verdi's "Falstaff."—Reuter.

PRESSMAN AND DOCTOR FRIEND.

BERLIN, Saturday.—German journalists are no longer allowed to mix with Jews, according to a decision of the Court at Stettin.

The case before the Court concerned a journalist who was accused of going to a Jewish doctor and being on friendly terms with him.

The Court concluded that the journalist had not the "proper antipathy towards Jews which was required of a journalist" and that he had shown himself unworthy of carrying on his profession.

He was therefore found guilty and ordered to be struck of the official list of journalists.—Reuter.

DUBLIN SHOOTING AFFAIR.

WHERE THE JURY DISAGREED.

Finding that Peter M'Carthy (20), [illegible] Road, Kimmage, died of gunshot wounds after an affray in Lower Clanbrassil Street, Dublin, on June 15, [illegible] jury at Dublin City Morgue yesterday added:—"But we cannot agree on the following points:—(1) that Peter M'Carthy was armed; (2) that Detective Officer Brocklebank could not have inflicted the wounds from the position in which M'Carthy was standing."

According to Civic Guard evidence [illegible] adjourned inquest—yesterday, [illegible] third day—M'Carthy produced a revolver beside a car in which detectives [illegible] two men, and was shot.

[illegible] A. E. Wood, for the next-of-kin, [illegible] Dr. D. A. WAGES AND HOURS.

SUGGESTION OF UNION.

INDUSTRIAL COUNCIL WANTED.

The disparity in wages and hours of employment of workers engaged by local authorities and public bodies in Ulster formed the subject of a communication discussed by Fermanagh County Council on Friday, Right Hon. Sir Basil Brooke, Bart., M.P. (chairman), presiding.

The Secretary (Mr. H. J. D. Moffitt, J.P.) stated that the Ministry of Labour had forwarded for the Council's consideration a letter from the National Union of General and Municipal Workers and the Amalgamated Transport and General Workers' Union. This letter referred to the wages and conditions of employment of the workers employed by the various local authorities in Northern Ireland, and stated there was considerable variation in the wages and hours of employment. In regard to County Councils it was pointed out that the wages and hours varied from 31s 6d for a 50-hour week in County Down to 25s to 27s 6d for a 54-hour week in County Tyrone. Borough and Urban Councils also varied considerably, from 50s for a 47-hour week in Belfast to 30s for a 50-hour week in Warrenpoint. There were many instances where it was difficult even to get consideration by the local authorities, and there should be some regulation and stability of wage. They suggested the formation of a Joint Industrial Council for workers of non-trading departments, which worked very successfully in England, Scotland, and Wales.

Mr. W. Blake said he thought it should be adopted.

Mr. J. M'Loughlin said the conditions varied in different places. The cost of living was higher, for instance, in the city than in the country.

The Council agreed to appoint a representative or representatives to any committee which the Government might set up.

MINER'S £350 CLAIM FAILS.

DRUNK WHEN HURT, SAYS SHERIFF.

Stating that it had been proved that the plaintiff was drunk at the time of the crash, Sheriff Umpherston at Dunfermline dismissed the action of a miner for £350 damages for loss and injury suffered in a road accident in December, 1936.

Hugh O'Hare, High Valleyfield, sued James Gay, North Queensferry, but Sheriff Umpherston said he had failed to prove that any negligence on the part of the defendant caused or contributed to the injuries.

"There is not a word to support O'Hare's story that Gay drove in a reckless and careless manner and at an excessive speed, and failed to keep a proper look-out, or to have control of his car," said the Sheriff. He added that in his opinion it had been proved that O'Hare and his companion were drunk at the time of the accident, and Gay had no reason to anticipate that both or one of the men would leave the footpath and take to the road.

As Gay was passing the men, O'Hare, in his fuddled condition, awoke to the fact that something was happening, and either walked or stumbled off the footpath and came against the car and was thrown to the ground, the Sheriff concluded.

'SCOTCH NIGHT' AT CARRICKFERGUS

The fourth annual "Scotch Night," under the auspices of Sullatober Amateur Flute Band, Carrickfergus, was held in the Jubilee Hall on Friday night. Over 350 guests responded to invitations, and the music was supplied by Archie and his Swingers, Belfast. Mr. Samuel Allen was M.C.

During the evening songs were contributed by Messrs. Matthew Patterson and Jimmy Dick, and an exhibition of Scotch reels and hornpipes was given by Miss Lucille Smyth, Ayr.

Prizes were awarded for spot and novelty dances.

CHIMPS IN BELFAST ZOO

JACK BREAKS THE FURNITURE

JACK and MARY

Two of the most interesting new inhabitants of the Bellevue Zoo are Jack and Mary, the chimpanzees which recently arrived from East Africa.

These animals are extremely delicate and arrived in a specially constructed travelling case which was padded with very thick felt and fitted with an ingenious heating apparatus in order that the temperature should be kept at 65° F.

They are now housed in the Chimps' House, which is situated on the top terrace and furnished with bed, chairs, table, washstand, clock, and complete with table appointments. Mary, who is of a very docile nature, settled down at once and immediately went to bed, but Jack, with the energy of one whose movements had for several days been rather confined, proceeded to break up the furniture.

Stamping his feet with glee, he soon had the table and most of the other furniture reduced to matchwood, but strange to say he did not touch the clock.

However, under the kindly administration of the head-keeper, who served him with a meal consisting of brown bread and butter, apples, oranges and grapes, he soon became quiet and even confiding.

Jack and Mary retire to bed at nine o'clock, but, like many human beings, they definitely do not like getting up in the morning.

L.N.E.R. CHAIRMAN RETIRES

MR. WHITELAW STATES HIS REASONS.

Mr. Wm. Whitelaw, chairman of the L.N.E.R., has intimated to his colleagues on the board of the company that, owing to his age and his having had to assume onerous personal responsibilities consequent on the recent death of his elder brother, he finds it impossible to continue to give adequate time to the affairs of the company, and that he desires to retire from the board at a date convenient to them.

ROAD ACCIDENT VICTIMS.

IDENTIFIED BY FINGER-PRINTS.

A woman killed by a hearse and a man fatally injured by a bicycle were stated at London inquests yesterday to have been identified by finger-prints.

At the Camberwell inquest on the woman known to the police as Ethel Baker, Mary Smith, and May Elliott (44), evidence was given that a crowd assembled in Coldharbour Lane, Brixton, during an altercation between a costermonger and a customer. The woman suddenly ran across the road and was hit by a hearse which was going slowly. A verdict of "Accidental death" was recorded.

Daniel Stewart (60), a pastry cook, living in a Whitechapel Road lodging-house, was fatally injured by a pedal-cycle in Parliament Square, London.

It was stated at the Westminster inquest, when the verdict was "Accidental death," that the police had a file containing a photograph and description of Stewart.

COUNTERFEIT COIN CASE.

ARRESTS AT CIGARETTE MACHINE.

At the Belfast Commission on Friday, Alexander M'Cormick, Tennent Street, and Albert Wilson, Ballymoney Street, were found guilty of uttering counterfeit coin.

Evidence was given that the accused were seen acting suspiciously near a cigarette machine in Donegall Square. When arrested counterfeit coins were found in their possession.

They were put back for sentence.

THE BOOK OF INISHOWEN.

An interesting book compiled by Mr. Harry Percival Swan, P.C., F.R.S.A.I., which deals with one of the most fascinating districts in County Donegal, has just been published.

It is "The Book of Inishowen," and has as its contributors such well-known people as Professor J. K. Charlesworth, Rev. Walter Hegarty, Mr. S. Henry, F.R.S.A.I.; Professor R. A. S. Macalester, Mr. Henry Morris, M.A., and Dr. Lloyd Praeger.

There are over 90 illustrations, and among the subjects dealt with are archæology, botany, fishing, folklore, geology, golf, history and poetry. It should have a great appeal to all lovers of Irish countryside, and especially to those who have experienced the delights of a holiday on the Inishowen Peninsula. The book is published by Wm. Doherty & Co., Ltd., Bank Buildings, Buncrana, Co. Donegal. It's price is 2s 6d (by post 2s 10d).

SUDETEN GERMAN PROBLEM.

THE NAZI AMBASSADOR

HAS INTERVIEW WITH PREMIER.

Dr. von Dirksen, the German Ambassador in London, had a long conversation with the Prime Minister on Friday at 10 Downing Street. The Ambassador is returning to Germany to-day on leave, states the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" Diplomatic correspondent.

It was understood that Dr. von Dirksen had been instructed to raise with Mr. Chamberlain the question of a basis for procuring a temporary settlement of the German-Czecho-Slovak controversy.

It is known that Herr Hitler's adjutant, Captain Fritz Wiedmann, when he saw Viscount Halifax, the Foreign Secretary, on Monday, gave explicit assurances that Herr Hitler desired to see a peaceful solution of this affair.

Reports from Berlin have referred to the possibility of finding a basis for a truce between Germany and Czecho-Slovakia, during which one assumes it would be proposed to establish the basis of a final settlement.

It was later reported in London that Herr Hitler's suggestions, as conveyed by Dr. von Dirksen, included a proposal that there should be a conference on the Sudeten German question between Britain, France, Germany and Italy. This was denied, however, in authoritative circles.

Viscount Halifax will be in consultation to-day with the Prime Minister on his return from accompanying the King during the State visit to France. He will report on the latest exchange of views in Paris between himself and the French Prime Minister, M. Daladier, and the Foreign Minister, M. Bonnet.

Mr. Chamberlain and Lord Halifax will consider whether in their view there has been any actual change in the European situation during the past week.

GIRL WIFE'S ESCAPADE.

STOLEN CAR OUTING.

Allegations that a 20-year-old married woman had stolen a car, and then "picked up" two men, intending to take them to a roadhouse, were made at Birmingham Police Court yesterday, when the woman, Gwendoline May Lawrence, a native of Cowbridge, South Wales, was charged with stealing the car and driving while uninsured.

Mrs. Lawrence told the Bench that she had had some drink when she took the car, acting on an impulse, and had picked the men up.

The woman's mother said her daughter had formerly owned a drapery business in a South Wales village, but had gambled so heavily that she had nearly put them in the workhouse. She had sold her car for £29 and had spent the money in two evenings.

Fining Mrs. Lawrence a total of £3, and suspending her from driving for 12 months, the Chairman (Alderman W. E. Lovsey) said she had behaved very badly towards her old mother.

"You have decamped with money given you to pay bills," he said.

"You have wasted your substance on racecourses. You made the acquaintance of men you previously didn't know, and you drove a car without being insured, so that if you had knocked any poor soul down he would not have been able to get a brass farthing."

The girl's mother said she would pay her daughter's fine and take her back to Wales.

A MATCH FOR THEM.

"You say you were selling matches?" asked a police witness at Tower Bridge Court.

"Yes," replied the accused, charged with betting.

"How is it that the five boxes on your tray were all empty?"

"Oh, they're my wet weather stock."

HOPES DISAPPOINTED.

THE position of the British shipbuilding industry, with which the vital interests of the country are closely bound up, is giving cause for uneasiness at the present time. We cannot shut our eyes to the fact that untoward developments are taking place. A telling example of this has just come to hand. On July 14 last Sir Edward Beatty, chairman of the Canadian Pacific Company, arrived in England on a mission which was generally hailed as full of promise. He said that before going back to Canada he hoped to place contracts for two new ships for the Canadian-Australasian Line, the total amount involved being at least £3,000,000. He also stated that if world conditions were favourable orders would probably be placed next year for two large luxury liners for the Pacific service to replace the Empress of Russia and the Empress of Asia, while in 1940 they might build a sister ship to the Empress of Britain. That programme, if carried out as intended, would have meant an expenditure of some £11,000,000 in shipbuilding in this country within the next three years. It is much to be regretted that a statement issued on Friday evening by Sir Edward Beatty and Lord Craigmyle has gravely disappointed the expectations aroused by the statement referred to. The construction of the two new ships for the Canadian - Australasian Line is "impracticable for the present," we are told.

The reason given is that shipbuilding prices have reached an "uneconomical peak." An agreement had been drafted between the Canadian Pacific Company and the Governments of the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, and Fiji providing for financial assistance from these Governments for the construction of the two ships referred to. Plans and specifications for the ships have been submitted by the Company to selected shipbuilding firms and quotations have been received, but in view of the cost it has been decided that "construction is impracticable until economical prices prevail." The existence of such conditions as are described must inevitably result in large orders going abroad which could have been executed in Great Britain and Northern Ireland. A tangible warning of this danger is afforded by the Blue Star Line, which has two motor vessels in course of construction at Belfast. It has placed orders for two cargo motor-ships with a Copenhagen firm, and has now ordered a third similar vessel of larger size, over 13,000 tons, from them. The firm in question, Messrs. Burmeister & Wain, has also secured an order for the construction of a fruit-carrying motor-ship for a Norwegian company. There is urgent need for an inquiry into the various factors, such as the cost of iron and steel, which have contributed to bring about this highly unsatisfactory state of affairs, which, if it continues, must keep many skilled workers unemployed at our shipbuilding centres while orders worth millions of pounds are going to foreign firms. If action is too long delayed, ground will be lost which cannot be speedily regained.

Thoughts for the Times.

HAVE YOU STAYING POWER…?

NEW names for old things act like a fresh coat of paint, they make the old house look like new and call forth zest once more in the pursuit of familiar aims.

The modern psychological term for courage is "tension-capacity," and it is illuminating. The power to "hold on," to carry an interesting strain calmly and invincibly is the greatest quality of the human soul. It demands the maximum of self-denial, even to the utter exclusion of that luxury which has the subtlest appeal of all to the human mind—self-pity.

I have a friend who frequently says rather quaintly, "I will bear anything if you will only let me groan and grumble." This is a good illustration of tension-capacity, halting just short of its true self and admitting that small element of corrosion which, if allowed to spread, so easily destroys the whole.

If you are going to "hold on" in life it must not be reluctantly, or, to put it in more classic language, "no man having put his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the Kingdom of God."

WE may be inclined at times to complain of the burden of endurance that life tends to place upon us. Yet, if we will look deeper into our own souls, we shall discover a certain satisfaction arising at the compliment that it pays to our heroism.

If we can add to this the conviction that the strain of life, which tests us so severely, is not wanton but has its purpose; that it does not represent opposition so much as opportunity; that it is not because God is against us, but very definitely because He is for us, then our tension-capacity is likely to reach its highest peak. Jesus said once to His disciples, "In your patience ye shall win your soul." He saw this practice of endurance as the means whereby the soul appropriates the very strength of God.

Moreover, it is this quality of endurance which has given humanity its victory in the vast struggle of its chequered history. Not so much to the strong, or to the swift, or to the cunning, has the battle gone, but to the patient. So true has this been that a great poet could write:—

"Endurance is the crowning quality
And patience all the passion of great hearts:
These are their stay, and when the leaden world
Sets its hard face against their fateful thought,
And brute strength, like a scornful conqueror,
Clangs his huge mace down in the other scale;
The inspired soul but flings his patience in,
And slowly that outweighs the ponderous globe,
One faith against a whole earth's unbelief,
One soul against 'the flesh of all mankind.'"

THERE is a story in Greek mythology which tells how King Menelaus and his men were marooned on a certain island. Consulting an oracle upon this island as to the wisdom of calling upon Neptune, the god of the sea, for deliverance, he was warned that unless he could hold the god when he appeared his wish would not be granted.

Menelaus called upon the god to appear, and at last a great fish floated in the water at the edge of the shore. He and his men at once seized it, and in spite of its tremendous struggles they held on. Presently it changed with appalling suddenness to a lion and then to a serpent, but still they held on.

After struggle upon struggle they were at length rewarded by the appearance of the god himself, and with his aid they made their escape and came at last home.

There is a deep and thrilling sense in which it is true that the soul which endures to the end does indeed realise God for it grows in the strength and the beauty of divine character. This is the greatest gift that life bestows upon striving heroic humanity, and it is a gift that can be won in all circumstances by the lowly as well as by the highly placed, by the poor as well as by the rich, by the ignorant as well as by the wise.

Every lover of true sport knows that the supreme quality of the athlete is "staying power," and in the long course that life presents to most of us it becomes our supreme requirement and our noblest virtue.

As Sir Hugh Walpole makes old Frosted Moses say, in his great novel "Fortitude," "It is not life that matters, but the courage you bring to it." Do not be then too concerned about the circumstances that beset your life, but look well to your tension-capacity.

Dr. A. D. Belden.

Hillsborough— A Parish with a Past

UNDOUBTEDLY one of the most beautiful and historic churches in the Diocese of Down is the Parish Church of Hillsborough.

Harris in his "County of Down" (1744) states "The Parish of Hillsborough was anciently called Crumlin; but changed its name to Hilsborough (Hillsborough) from the family of the Hills, one of whom, Sir Moses Hill, Kt., settled here in the reign of King James the First, and became possessed of a very considerable estate in this country."

Moses Hill was of Devonshire stock. He was the younger son of Robert Hill, and penniless. What remained of the family estates near Exeter had been squandered absolutely by his father and elder brother, so very naturally he had to seek his fortune elsewhere. He was born circa 1553 and at the age of 20 years arrived in Ireland in the train of the Earl of Essex on the latter's ill-fated expedition. Subsequently he was appointed Governor of Olderfleet Castle. In 1603 he was knighted by James I.

This founder of the noted Hill family of Hillsborough lived at Olderfleet Castle, Caen ban (Whitehead, Co. Antrim), Malone or Stranmillis, and then at Hillhall (near Lisburn), where he died February, 1629-30. Sir Moses Hill was a very far-seeing man and endowed with a quick brain.

As has already been noted, Hillsborough was previously called Crumlin, sometimes spelt Crom Lyn, meaning the "sloped or crooked glen." Near this glen stood a very ancient church—the Chapel of St. Malachy of Cromlyn, probably dating from the 7th century. In 1609 King James I constituted by charter the Chapter of Down, and assigned to the Archdeacon and his successors "the Rectories and Vicarages of Kilclieff, Drumbo, Drumbegg and the Chapel of St. Malachias."

✩

IN 1622, in the report of the Ulster Visitation made by authority of James I, under the head of "Archdeaconry of Downe," there is recorded "Capella Sti. Malachiæ, a ruin; a ruynous place, the tithes known to belong to Drumbo"; and a further reference is also made, which reads "Capella de Crumline a ruin—no curate, nor able to mayntayne any; fitting to be united to the next Church, which is Drumbo." A report for the year 1633 states that this Chapel is noted as "a member of the Archdeaconry and parcell of Drumbo: William Forbesse (sometimes and correctly spelt Forbes), curate."

About 1644, Colonel Arthur Hill, second son of Sir Moses Hill, succeeded to the estates. In 1662 Colonel Hill "translated the Parish Church of Hillsborough to a more commodious place for the inhabitants, and, at his own expense, erected a spacious, well-contrived church on a rising ground, in the form of a cross dedicated to St. Malachias, where he lies buried in the family vault." Colonel Hill died in 1663.

In the history of Hillsborough that famous and noted benefactor of Hillsborough and also of the Church of Ireland made his appearance in the person of Wills Hill, second Earl of Hillsborough and who subsequently became the first Marquis of Downshire by which title he is best known, and justly so. He had a great love for the preservation of old churches. Along with Very Rev. William Annesley, Dean of Down, he did much for the restoration of Down Cathedral; and in 1788 decided the site for the erection of the new Parish Church of Drumbo in the Diocese of Down, and in the latter parish he had 43 acres, 1 rood, 34 perches of land, for which he paid a tithe of £1 12s 9d.

IN 1762 Wills Hill granted a lease for ever of twenty acres of glebe to Francis Hutchinson, Archdeacon of Down and his successors. This church was subsequently taken down by Wills Hill, who erected in its stead (1772) the present beautiful Parish Church of Hillsborough at his own expense. The following entry appears in a register in the church:—"August 22nd, 1773—Hillsborough Church was opened. Prayers were read by the Rev. Hill Benson, and an excellent sermon, on the occasion, preached by the Rev. Archdeacon Benson."

According to tradition, Wills Hill hoped that some day this church would be raised to the rank of a cathedral, so he spent most lavishly in beautifying it—but this wish was never fulfilled. Wills Hill was buried at Hillsborough.

According to Bishop Reeves "By the charter of James I. the rectory and vicarage of Drumbo with Hillsborough, were placed in the corps of the Archdeaconry of Down. It is probable that the rectory was at the date of the Taxation appropriate to that dignity."

The Venerable Robert Mant, B.D., Archdeacon of Down, 1828-1834, died in April, 1834; and on the vacancy occurring the Lord Lieutenant and the Privy Council, under the powers of the Church Temporalities Act, disappropriated from the Archdeaconry the Rectories of Drumbo, Drumbeg and Kilclief, leaving to the future Archdeacons the Rectory of Hillsborough only, and the glebe lands of Kilclief.

Hillsborough Parish Church and Drumbo have both a very fine peal of bells. In one of the numerous election squibs of the 18th century the Hillsborough bells were referred to as "The bells of this church are heard seven miles around."

✩

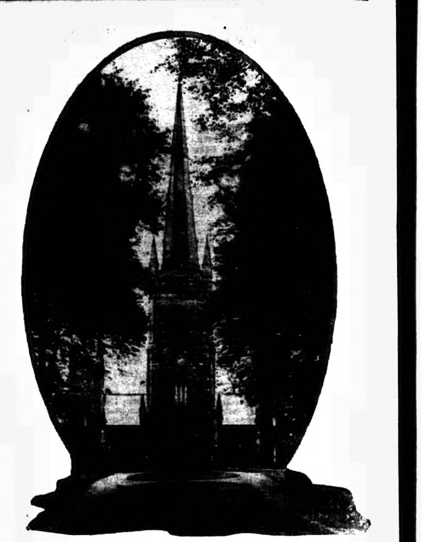
THE Hillsborough bells consist of a peal of eight, which were erected in 1773, and were cast by I. Rudhall, of Gloucester (who also cast the Drumbo Parish Church bells in 1791), so this information should settle the "dispute" as to which of these two churches has the older peal.

The Downshire family maintained a company of bellringers, and also provided funds for a surpliced choir and an organist. A beautiful chancel meets the gaze of all who enter. Its floor of Irish marble was laid by the Rt. Hon. Lord Arthur Hill in memory of his father, the fourth Marquis of Downshire. He also presented the brass eagle lectern. There are also monuments to the memory of the fifth Marquis, executed by Forsythe, and one to Archdeacon Leslie, by Nollekins. The Communion vessels, of solid silver, were presented by Mary, widow of Colonel Arthur Hill, in 1663.

When the present church was built, Wills Hill, Marquis of Downshire, superintended the work himself, and the time taken in its erection was 13 years. Only the best of materials were used in its construction.

The organ is a most interesting one. It was one of the first in Northern Ireland, and was supplied by John Snetzler, a well-known Belgian organ builder. The vault of the Downshire family is under the north tower of the church. Arthur, the third Marquis, was interred here on April 28, 1845.

In the "Dromore Parish Magazine," Dromore Church Association, June 1, 1860, there is a very interesting description given of an entertainment held at Hillsborough:—"1837, October 19—The Marquis of Downshire gave an entertainment to the tenantry of his estates on the occasion of the marriage of his eldest son, the Earl of Hillsborough. The dinner was laid out in the court-yard, or bowling green, of the old castle, and upwards of 3,500 persons sat down at twenty-two tables besides some hundreds of ladies and gentlemen who witnessed the scene."



HILLSBOROUGH PARISH CHURCH
"Undoubtedly one of Down's most beautiful and historic churches."

This function is still talked about by old Hillsborough residents whose parents witnessed that most memorable scene.

✩

MANY readers will remember the long association of Rev. Canon Richard Arthur Kernan, B.A., B.D., with Hillsborough Parish Church. He was first of all curate of the parish, 1880-1890, and subsequently became its rector, 1890-1913.

Canon Kernan was for many years honorary secretary of the Down Diocesan Council and also assistant secretary of the Representative Church Body. He married Miss Sarah Shillington, of Portadown.

Dublin University honoured him by the appointment as Donnellan Lecturer, 1904-5, and Select Preacher, 1903-4. In 1913 Canon Kernan retired from Hillsborough and died on March 22, 1927.

The present rector, Rev. Francis Matchett, B.A., B.D., was instituted on December 6, 1913, and worthily maintains the ecclesiastical traditions of his distinguished predecessors.

The Duke of Abercorn, Governor of Northern Ireland, attends Hillsborough Parish Church, and takes a close interest in its activities.

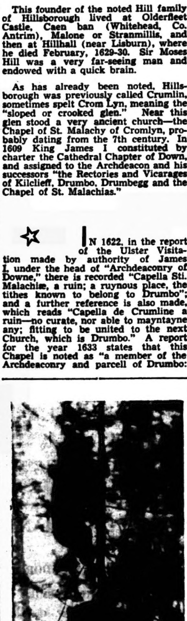
Encounters with Nova Scotia's "Nosey Parker" Bears



These bears seem to have found a safe haven.

IT is a general opinion that the Nova Scotia black bear as a rule is more inquisitive than dangerous, and in those counties where they keep back in the big woods, away from the settlements, they are rarely molested.

There are, however, many areas given to sheep raising, and it is there that the farmers may lose lambs and sheep to these big black prowlers. It is said, too, that once a bear has tasted mutton he will ever after lurk about sheep pastures. Actually very few sheep are destroyed as a result of the depredations of bears in this province.

Woodsmen used to claim that the black bear was a lone hunter, that only a mother bear and cubs, or a pair, would be seen together, but this theory has been disproved many times. On several occasions within recent years hunters and lumbermen have seen as many as four or five bears in a group.

One moose hunter following a fresh trail in the Shulee woods came suddenly upon three big bears. The foremost bear reared and faced him in the manner a startled old Bruin so often adopts. The hunter fired on the instant, taking a snap shot, and the huge animal dropped amongst the brush. The other bears vanished like dark shadows.

THE hunter, quite excited by his encounter, stepped ahead to investigate his kill and got another thrill. The bear was not dead. It sprang up and charged, snarling with fury. More excited than ever, the hunter fumbled in his reloading and lost the bolt from his rifle. Leaping backward, he reversed his weapon and used it as a club. He landed a terrific blow that finished the bear and also completely smashed his rifle stock.

Another hunter, returning from a successful trip, met four bears on a swamp road. It was a track built of brush and poles, commonly called a "corduroy road," and on either side were slimy pools and shaky morass. The hunter had but two cartridges; he had expended the rest of his ammunition.

The leading bear reared and growled a menace. Taking quick aim, the hunter shot the big brute through the head and it collapsed, a furry heap, on the roadway. The second bear reared, and again the hunter's aim was true. He worked the rifle bolt to reload and saw there was no cartridge.

THERE was nothing more he could do except to fight to the death with clubbed weapon and knife, but as he looked the other bears began shuffling off, going back the way they had come. The hunter allowed them ample time to get out of his way and then made record time to the settlement.

During the summer the bears will often prowl about orchards and farmyards. They will visit camps of fishermen and loggers, and even steal lunches from the carts of berry pickers.

Two log cutters were working far back in the bush last summer and sleeping in a tent at night. They were roused by some heavy object colliding with the tent ropes and heard a loud snuffing.

On emerging suddenly they were confronted by a large bear, so startled by their appearance that he growled, then tried to bolt into the nearest thicket. Unfortunately for Bruin, a tangle of barbed wire fence was in his way and as he became entangled in it the loggers closed in from either side and with a few blows from their axes dispatched the intruder.

It is very seldom that a bear will attack cattle or a full-grown moose. Many cases are known of an ox killing a bear in a pasture battle and a bull moose is ever ready to dispute a woods path with a bear. But a black bear, fully grown, can be a dangerous enemy when roused.

His speed is deceptive, he is a tricky boxer and has immense power in his heavy legs and great clawed feet. They will kill a deer or moose calf weighing from 250 to 300 pounds and drag it a long distance to some place they favour.

Many stories are told by old hunters and loggers about the way a bear will remember an enemy. In Guysboro County a logger, accompanied by a huge dog, was cutting timber in a back area when a large bear appeared, followed by a little cub. The logger noticed that the big bear had, in some encounter, lost the most of one of her ears. Seeing the dog, the cub squalled alarm and swarmed up the trunk of a lodged tree.

The mother bear paused, but as the logger and dog approached her she fled into the brush. Using his thick jacket to guard him from small teeth and claws, the logger brought the cub from the tree and carried it home. During the night the old bear prowled outside the building where her cub was penned and smashed in a strong side wall in her attempts to reach him.

EVENTUALLY the logger sold the cub to a circus, and kept on with his log cutting. In this he was always accompanied by his son and the dog, until late in the fall, when the son took the dog with him on a hunting expedition. During the day the logger felt that he was being watched, and he grew somewhat nervous, but nothing happened until he started for home.

Then the old bear with one ear calmly blocked his way and began a battle to the death. She was old, but determined, and had planned her attack with cunning. Only the fact that the logger was an expert axeman, and had had experience with other bears, saved his life. He finally killed his attacker, but before he succeeded in doing so he had been so badly hurt himself that he was crippled for life.

The black bear is a powerful swimmer when necessity arises, but is seldom seen in a lake or stream. He is an ardent fisherman, and will exhibit remarkable patience beside an eddy or pool where lazy fat suckers or disabled trout may float into the shallows.

A flick of the paw, and they are landed high on the bank, where Bruin lunches at leisure. He will tear old logs open to get a bee's nest or climb any tree to reach one, as he is very fond of honey, and seems immune to bee stings.

MOST of all, the Nova Scotia black bear loves thick molasses or maple syrup, and will risk his hide at any time in order to secure the sweetness. Often in the days when sugar makers cooked the maple sap in big iron pots, which were left in roofed shelters, Bruin came in the night, tore down the pot, and spilled all its contents on the snow. A few pounds of fresh-made maple candy placed on birch bark is said to be an irresistible bait for a deadfall trap set for bear in the spring.

In the autumn bears are usually found in the areas where blueberries are plentiful, as they love the juicy fruit. A bear will sit on his haunches and strip blueberry bushes as cleverly as a boy, and will consume huge amounts of the berries before being sated.

His appetite is enormous throughout the autumn months, for he is providing his body with thick layers of fat in order that he may sleep warm during the winter curled up in a rocky cave.

Uncommon Sense

Ocean Ploughing—By JOHN BLAKE.

Some time ago I had some business to attend to in a New York office. As I sat in the office I could see the harbour through the window, a magnificent panorama of ships and ocean. One trim little sea-going vessel caught my attention and I asked my friend what her name was.

"That," he said, "is the cable ship, Lord Kelvin. She has just come back from repairing cables in the Caribbean. And now she is off for a special job off the Irish coast. The last few days she was here to take aboard the longest and most unique chain ever manufactured. It is in one unbroken piece, 4,200 feet long. The links are nickel steel, each link drop-forged and tested carefully before it was included in the whole. That chain was brought here all the way from Chester, Pennsylvania, on a special gondola freight car."

I asked what they wanted a chain like that for.

"They are going to plough a furrow in the ocean floor," my friend replied, and that chain will pull the plough. It costs too much now-a-days to just rest the Transatlantic cable on the ocean floor. Fishermen drag the bottom with weights attached to their nets. Those otter-boards, as they are called, don't do a cable any good when they pass over it. In fact the cable companies all over the world have been losing about half a million dollars a year just from the damage from otter-boards. And so they have developed this new method.

"The Lord Kelvin employs a technique which will dig a deep furrow on the ocean floor 2,000 feet down, set the Transatlantic cable in the ditch, and then cover it, all in one operation."

We watched the business-like little boat until she was out of sight. I say "little" in comparing her to the Normandie or the Queen Mary, but actually she is pretty large. Her length is 332 feet over all. She displaces 2,641 tons, and can carry, I have been told, 700 miles of deep sea cable in her hold. A few years ago she would have been considered a sizeable boat and her speed of 12 knots would have sseemed pretty fast. But to-day she is just a little slow boat. She is one of a fleet of 30 vessels operated for cable maintenance.

Probably by the time you read this she will have reached her area and will be busy engaged in ploughing up the ocean bottom so that the Transatlantic cable can be inserted deep enough to be safe from the otter-boards which steam trawlers are dragging over the ground. Her crew will go about the work in the usual businesslike manner of efficient sailors. They won't stop to think that the thing they are doing is out of the ordinary—it's mere everyday business with them.

• • •

But to me this already fantastic business of having a cable between Europe and America over which messages can be sent will have an added thrill from now on. Think of being able to plough up the bottom of the ocean!

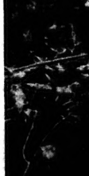
"Horseshoe" Hammond Next?
Cricket Luck Reflections.

LONDON, Saturday.



Walter Hammond.

IF Walter Hammond continues to have the luck of the toss against the Australians much longer our cricket fans will be calling him "Horseshoe" Hammond, a nickname which stuck to Herbert Collins, the former Australian captain.

He earned the title because of his extraordinary luck at cricket, including his almost invariable winning of the toss, though when he came over here to lead the Australians in the 1926 tour he only won the toss three out of five times.

Furthermore, one of his losing calls was on the occasion of the vital deciding match at the Oval when England regained the Ashes. In Australia, however, his luck was proverbial.

An England player when in Australia once said of him:—"If the fellow Collins fell over Westminster Bridge he would find that the Thames had run dry and that somebody had put a feather bed down for him to fall on."

When Collins put serious cricket aside owing to attacks of neuritis, he put his luck to the test by blossoming out as a racecourse bookmaker.

Lamp-Stroke.

AFTER being present while Mr. Speaker was being "shot," I confess to a certain amount of sympathy with the film artists. Their emoluments are high, but I should myself hesitate to work in such a glare.

I have of course heard of the "make-up" of the film artists dripping off their faces while films were being made. But without the personal experience it is impossible to realise what all this means.

Mr. Speaker himself dropped his eyes in face of the glare of the arc lamps. Others who were not so wise mopped their eyes with pocket handkerchiefs for some time afterwards. Personally I turned my back on the glare, and for some hours afterwards I feared that I might be getting sunstroke.

Auld Acquaintance.

SIR Bruce Bruce-Porter, eminent physician and apostle of the simple life, is leaving England to-day on a world tour which is to last nearly a year. On his travels he will be greeted by many overseas ex-Servicemen who were his patients during the war, many of whom owe their lives to his skill and patience.

Sir Bruce commanded war hospitals in England and Mesopotamia during those fateful years. One of them was the Third London General Hospital at Wandsworth, where in 2,600 beds thousands of Dominion troops, including 20,000 Australians, were restored to health and useful citizenship.

The Veterans' Association of Newfoundland have already made plans to enable Sir Bruce to meet many of his war-time patients, and a similar welcome will be extended by ex-members of the Australian Expeditionary Force when he reaches Sydney in October. In March he will arrive for a two months' stay in New Zealand, where the late Lady Bruce-Porter was born.

A Famous Escape.

THIS Sunday twenty years ago 29 officers escaped from Holzminden Concentration Camp by a tunnel of 150 yards long which it took ten months to make. Two of the escapees have died since, but ten are known to be somewhere in England and the others are scattered over the face of the earth, which is a pity, for it was hoped this year to bring them all together this week-end.

One of the tunnellers was L. J. Bennett, who, as an airman, enjoyed the unequalled reputation of being captured by a submarine! He was forced down in the sea beside one and taken prisoner.

He found 600 British officers in the camp, and ten of them decided to make the tunnel. With crude implements they started in the basement of the camp under the protection of hoarding erected by the Germans! Finally, it was completed, and an officer, now partner in a firm in Bloomsbury, was the first to go through it. The thirteenth man might have been superstitious, but as he is now an air commodore one can see his luck was in.

Many of them in German uniforms escaped, but 19 were caught. The air commodore sent a postcard from safety to the commandant, thanking him for the holiday.

Early Days Of Cycling.

ONE of the early enthusiasts at cycling, about the time when the Dunlop pneumatic tyre was invented was the present Duke of Argyll, who has just become joint proprietor of an airport on his flat little island of Tiree, in the Inner Hebrides.

The Duke in spite, or, perhaps, because, of his cycling, has never taken kindly either to the motor-car or aeroplane. But in 1886, when he was a schoolboy at Charterhouse, he used to hide a cycle in a shed to enjoy the thrill of a ride on the hog's back between Guildford and Farnham.

A Charterhouse boy with a bike was unheard of in those days. A year or two later when he went abroad to study French he cycled over the Simplon Pass and from San Moritz to Engadine. The Duke once told how in 1900 all the dowagers of Mayfair used to go tootling round Battersea Park on cycles, and how one of them used to be accompanied by two butlers to keep her perspiring form in an upright position.

The Lord Mayor's Showman.

THERE have in recent years been many criticisms that the annual Lord Mayor's show has outlived its day, and is an unnecessary and unmitigated evil under modern traffic conditions.

Mr. J. Dixon Taylor, who has helped to produce 59 of them and has been principal producer of the last 33, does not share this view, and arrangements are already in progress for him to organise his last show on November 9 before he retires from the office of principal clerk to the City Remembrancer.

The point that is so frequently overlooked is that the annual procession of the Lord Mayor, Sheriffs, Under-Sheriffs and other City officials is fixed for November 9 by Act of Parliament and must take place until the Act is repealed. The show on two occasions was, in fact, curtailed to the actual Lord Mayor's procession, but the crowds which gathered to see it on those occasions provided all the elements of congestion and disturbance of the City's normal life, and the opinion is generally held nowadays that if there must be some sort of a start it may as well be a real one.

On the occasion of the first curtailment it was openly suggested that the Lord Mayor was actuated by parsimony and he afterwards gave large sums to charities to prove otherwise.

Commons Revolution.

TO one who is acquainted with the Members' Lobby in the House of Commons, it is just a little startling to find it converted into a film studio.

In the ordinary way there are very few people who can get into it. The M.P.'s, of course, walk to and fro; they have the right to introduce strangers, but they exercise it sparingly when the House is sitting.

Without any permission at all a Peer can go into it, and as a matter of fact I know three who do so habitually.

But for a cameraman to be granted admission constitutes a revolution in Parliamentary practice, and I gather that it is one which has been permitted with some misgivings.

THE BLACK SCAB ORDER.

CO. DERRY PROSECUTION.

POSITION OF MERCHANTS.

At Maghera Petty Sessions on Thursday, before Major M'Lean, R.M., Sloan Bolton, Maghera, was summoned by the Ministry of Agriculture for attempting to obtain a licence by means of a false statement contrary to the Black Scab Order of 1930.

Mr. Bolton was also charged, along with his lorry driver, William Kelly, with moving potatoes without a licence.

Mr. R. Evan Burns, solicitor for Mr. Bolton, said that the defendant denied the false representation entirely, and went on to explain how the second charge arose, which he said was purely a technical offence.

Since a deputation from South Derry had attended at the Ministry about the matter, the Ministry had been induced to grant certain concessions to produce merchants, and were now for the first time granting licences to produce merchants in certain areas.

Mr. Bolton had on every occasion received a licence by applying to the local inspector. On this occasion the local inspector was on holidays, and Mr. Bolton tried to get in touch with the inspector for the adjoining district, but was unable to do so. His lorry driver, William Kelly, believed that Mr. Bolton held the licence just as on previous occasions, and on that morning set off with his lorry.

He submitted that the entire matter was simply a question of mistake beween Mr. Bolton and his driver. If Mr. Bolton had been able to get into touch with the local inspector he would have got the licence for the asking.

After evidence,

Major M'Lean, R.M., dismissed the charge of attempting to obtain a licence on the merits, and imposed the statutory penalty of £10 on Mr. Bolton for moving the potatoes without a licence. Kelly was fined £5.

[We regret that in a report of this case published yesterday it was stated that Mr. Bolton had been fined £10 for attempting to obtain the licence. This was not correct, and we hasten in justice to Mr. Bolton to give the Resident Magistrate's finding. The offence, it will be seen, was a technical one.]

SOLDIER WINS APPEAL

IN DERRY MOTORING ACTION.

In the Record Court at Derry City Assizes, before Mr. Justice Megaw, John G. O[illegible], of the 54th Co. R.A.S.C., Ebrington Barracks, Derry, appealed against the decision of the Recorder in granting a decree for £10 in a claim for £20 brought by Robert J. Wilson, Burna[illegible] alleged negligence in driving a motor-car whereby respondent was injured and his bicycle damaged.

Mr. J. Cooke (instructed by Mr. John ff Young) appeared for appellant, and Mr. H. A. M'Veigh (instructed by Mr. W. J. V. Seeds) was for the respondent.

His Lordship reversed the decision of the Court below and dismissed the claim with costs.

BELFAST MAN AS HOUSEBREAKER.

THREE-YEAR SENTENCE.

HOW SWANSEA CASE ENDED.

SNOOKER CHAMPION'S OFFENCES.

Stated to be the champion snooker player in Northern Ireland, William Agnew (32), a native of Belfast, and described as a ship's steward, was at the Glamorgan Assizes at Swansea found guilty of breaking and entering a house in Westcross Lane, Swansea, and stealing £6 12s 6d in money, a gold wristlet watch, a silver cigarette case, and a silver crucifix, on April 16 last.

He was further found guilty of having housebreaking implements in his possession for an unlawful purpose. He pleaded not guilty.

Evidence was given that six days after the offence he was seen by the headlights of a police patrol car to jump from the wall of another residence in the neighbourhood and in running away throw what proved to be two screwdrivers over the garden wall. He was caught, and taken into custody. Later the gold watch was found in his possession at his lodgings, but the money and the other articles had not been recovered.

DETECTIVE'S EVIDENCE.

Detective-Sergeant Evans, of Swansea, told Mr Justice Hilbery that Agnew was educated at the Mercantile College at Belfast and was afterwards employed as a clerk by the British Petroleum Company. He then assisted his father, who was a bookmaker in Belfast, until his father gave up the business. He then got work as a ship's steward, but frequented billiard halls, and became a billiard marker at a London club.

He came to Swansea in April, and within a few days there were eight complaints of housebreaking, which complaints ceased immediately Agnew was arrested on the present charge.

The Belfast police, said witness, described Agnew as a very bad type of criminal and an inveterate liar.

Accused had been convicted of breaking and entering at Liverpool and Belfast, receiving at Belfast two years' hard labour, when 50 other cases of housebreaking were taken into consideration. In Clerkenwell in February he was charged with assisting in keeping a common gaming house, and the case was adjourned sine die.

In passing sentence of three years' penal servitude, Mr. Justice Hilbery told Agnew that he only came to Swansea in April last and was with Harry Kolinsky, a convicted criminal, and lived at his home at Swansea, and at once began housebreaking. It was useless, he added, to give him a short sentence.

QUARTER SESSIONS.

ENGLISH COURT REFORM.

NEED OF QUALIFIED CHAIRMEN.

In the British House of Commons,

Consideration was given to the Administration of Justices (Miscellaneous Provisions) Bill, a long discussion taking place regarding a clause which had for its main purpose the enabling of local authorities of Quarter Sessions to have the power, if they so desired, to have a paid, legally-qualified chairman.

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL (Sir Donald Somervell) said the system of Quarter Sessions was a very old one and was rooted in local traditions. The progress made in obtaining legally qualified chairmen would of course be kept constantly under review by the Lord Chancellor. If counties failed without reasonable cause to appoint such chairmen, he would consider asking the House for further powers.

Mr. ATTLEE (Leader of the Opposition) said, "It is a very long time since I attended quarter sessions at the Bar but I recall there were some people then presiding who ought never to have been there."

Mr. EDE (Lab., South Shields) declared that quarter sessions chairmen were like old soldiers—they never died. (Laughter). As far as he could see they rarely faded away. (Laughter).

Mr. GOLDIE (C., Warrington) said his mind went back to the days rather before his time when the clerk of a court asked an accused if he pleaded guilty or not guilty. The accused replied "Not guilty," and the Clerk said "Then we shall see." (Laughter). There was also the case of a chairman, who was more venerated than respected, who asked a prisoner—"Do you wish to say anything to the jury before they find you guilty?" (Laughter).

"We have been tinkering about with quarter sessions for the last 10 or 15 years. The whole system wants overhauling," Mr. Goldie said.

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL pointed out that of the 136 chairmen and deputy-chairmen of quarter sessions, 103 were already legally qualified.

An amendment moved by Mr. SILVERMAN (Lab., Nelson and Colne), to make the appointment of legally qualified chairmen and deputy-chairmen of quarter sessions compulsory, was rejected by 103 to 83.

Mr. D. N. PRITT (Lab., North Hammersmith) described the present poor persons procedure as "one of the major hypocrisies of the law as it stands."

"BUGS AND BUTTERFLIES"

GIFT TO BRITISH MUSEUM.

When the House of Commons yesterday went into Committee to consider the British Museum Bill, which authorises the British Museum to accept the bequest of the late Lord Rothschild,

Mr. TINKER (Lab., Leigh) asked "as a matter of curiosity of what the collection left by Lord Rothschild consisted.

"It is a collection of bugs, butterflies, and stuffed animals and things of that kind," replied Captain EUAN WALLACE, Financial Secretary to the Treasury, "and consists chiefly of a very wonderful collection of what in scientific language are called lepidoptera, which to you and me means bugs, butterflies, and the like. When I used the words Zoological Museum the other night, I might have given the impression that many of these things are alive. They are not, but they will form a very valuable addition to the existing collection of the Natural History Museum."

The Bill passed through Committee with a minor amendment.

COTTON ACTION JUDGMENT.

SCIENTIST AWARDED £1,400.

Judgment for £1,479 11s with costs was given by Mr. Justice Hawke in the King's Bench Division, London, on Friday in favour of Dr. Sydney Cross Harland, of Snainton, Yorkshire, against the Empire Cotton Growing Corporation.

Dr. Harland sued the Corporation for breach of contract of his employment as head of the Department of Genetics at their cotton research station in Trinidad.

The jury, after a nineteen-day hearing, found that the Corporation were not justified in dismissing Dr. Harland without notice or compensation.

The jury found that Dr. Harland was not guilty of misconduct in his work, or by reason of immorality; that he did not enter into a conspiracy to pervert the course of justice in regard to getting evidence to enable his former wife to bring her successful divorce suit against him in 1932, and that he did not suborn two witnesses in the divorce suit to commit perjury.

Mr. Justice Hawke granted a stay of execution for 21 days.

DUBLIN STRIKE AVERTED.

GLASGOW TRAGEDIES

CRANE JIB FALLS ON MAN.

WOMAN STRUCK BY TRAMCAR.

Duncan M'Intyre, aged 30, steel erector, of Merton Drive, Glasgow, met a terrible fate when working in the engineering yard in Elliot Street. The jib of a ten tons crane fell on top of him, inflicting terrible injuries from which he died a few hours later.

Crossing Argyle Street late on Thursday night Mary M'Cann (51), of William Street, Anderston, Glasgow, was instantly killed when she was struck and knocked down by a tramcar.

G.N.R. VALUATION IN EIRE.

THE COMPANY'S APPEAL.

EVIDENCE BY COMMISSIONER.

Before Judge Davitt, in the Dublin Circuit Court, the hearing was resumed on Friday of the appeal brought by the Great Northern Railway Co. against the findings of the Commissioner of Valuation in respect of their holdings and property in Eire for the quinquennial period 1931-35.

Mr. John Herlihy, Commissioner of Valuation, giving detailed evidence as to the basis on which his findings were reached, said efforts had been made in consultation with the Great Northern Railway Co. and the Commissioner of Valuation for Northern Ireland to come to some compromise and to reach some basis which would be satisfactory to the company and the local authorities, but these had not been successful. The original figure for valuation was £34,000, but following efforts made to reach a compromise a figure of £17,500 was reached for the years 1931-35, which was a considerable reduction on the £34,000. The Monaghan County Council objected to this figure of £17,500 on the ground that it was too small and the railway company objected because it was too large, and the matter came before the Court of Appeal. The company submitted figures to show that their average net receipts for all Ireland were £123,042, but he found that the average net receipts were £127,402. Then came the question of tenants' capital and he found, working on the year ending December 31, 1935, that the total tenants' capital in Eire amounted to £231,528.

"STARTLING PROPOSITION."

At no stage since 1912, said Mr. Herlihy, when the railway companies were prosperous, had the annual profits amounted to as much as £500,000, yet the startling proposition was put forward to him that a railway company, making a profit of £500,000, should have the rental value of its property placed at nil. This was contended while all other properties in the country had their rental values estimated at substantial figures. If he accepted that submission it would mean that no rates would accrue to the local authorities from Irish railways and that even the profits would be exempt from rates. At no stage prior to the Act of 1931 would such a proposition be entertained. If this were the intention and effect of the Railways Valuation Act of 1931 instead of reforming the law, as was intended, it would have led to a preposterous result. In the case of railways, as in that of other trading concerns, the valuation must bear a proper proportion of the profits.

After examining the railway company's case he could only come to the conclusion that they had not merely ignored the Act but trampled on it.

The further hearing was adjourned until Monday.

CHARGE OF ROBBERY WITH VIOLENCE

PROCEEDS AGAINST TWO.

THIRD MAN IN HOSPITAL.

When a case against three men charged with robbery with violence from a Merchant Marine officer was called at the Belfast Commission yesterday, Lord Justice Best ruled that although one man was in hospital and unable to stand his trial, the case against the others should proceed.

The accused were William Murray, Grove Street; John Thompson, Earl Place; and Alexander Kerr, Norman Street, who were alleged to have violently robbed Francis J. P. Murphy of £4 on February 12 last.

Mr. John M'Gonigal, K.C. (instructed by Dr. J. V. S. Mills, Crown Solicitor), said Thompson was in the Union Hospital suffering from debility. He applied that the case against him should be adjourned, and that the trial of the other accused should proceed.

Mr. W. Martin M'Call (instructed by Mr. A. Lunn), who appeared for Murray opposed the application, on the ground that Thompson was an essential witness for the defence.

Mr. M'Gonigal said he did not see how that should be. He could not recollect that at the last hearing of the case Thompson gave any material evidence as to whether Murray was present.

On behalf of Kerr, Mr. P. A. Marrinan (instructed by Mr. D. P. Marrinan), who defended, asked that the trial should take place to-day.

Lord Justice Best ruled that the trial of Murray and Kerr, who pleaded not guilty, should proceed. If Murray's case was damnified in any way, the hearing could be stopped.

HE WENT TO COLLECT A BET.

Murphy said on February 12 last he was in a bar in Dock Street, to collect £4 from a bookmaker, with whom he had had a successful wager.

Lord Justice Best—Have you got the bet since?—I have not actually seen him.

In the bar, Murray told him the bookmaker would not turn up. At closing time he left with Murray and another man. When he got into Earl Lane he was struck on the jaw and knocked down.

Lord Justice Best—You weren't put asleep?—No.

Witness said as he lay someone kicked him several times on the head. Two men held him down, while another went through his pockets. He was left lying on the footpath, and found he had lost £4. Later, at a parade, he identified Murray.

Cross-examined, witness said he did not see Kerr. He could not tell what part Murray might have had in the assault.

Ernest Flanagan said he saw Murray hit Murphy twice, and kick him. Kerr was also one of the men who came out of the bar.

Ernest Cummings, who also saw the assault, said he could not identify any of the men.

Head-Constable Armstrong gave evidence of arrest. He said a fourth man had been acquitted.

In the witness-box, Kerr denied having any part in the attack. He left the bar before closing time.

Murray said he was never in the bar outside which the incident occurred. He produced evidence in support of an alibi.

By direction Kerr was found not guilty.

Murray was found guilty.

Head-Constable Armstrong said the class of offence was quite prevalent. Murray, he said, had a bad record.

Lord Justice Best passed a sentence of twelve months with hard labour.

He refused an application for bail pending an appeal.

ADJOURNED TO NEXT COURT.

Charges of larceny against Mary Ellen MacDermott and Bridget Smith, Academy Street, at the Belfast Commission, were adjourned to the next Court.

CAR STRIKES PRAM.

ROSTREVOR ACCIDENT.

CHILD ESCAPES UNINJURED.

A mother and her child had a remarkable escape at Rostrevor.

Mrs. James Curran, Church Street, Rostrevor, was wheeling her child in a pram near Ranfurly Corner when a motor-car, driven by Ian Hamilton, Belfast, struck a stay supporting a telegraph pole on the footpath, swung round and crashed into the pram.

Mrs. Curran, who was knocked down, received an injury to her hand, while the child, which was in the pram, was thrown clear and sustained no injury.

When stopped the rear mudguard of the car was embedded in the pram. The motorist and his passenger, Walter S. Mercer, Grand Parade, Belfast, who suffered from severe cuts and abrasions, were treated by Dr. J. A. O'Tierney and afterwards were able to proceed home in another car.

COACH—CAR ACCIDENT.

THREE PEOPLE DEAD.

Three people have died as the result of an accident which occurred on Thursday between a coach and a car in which were old people of High Wycombe on a day's outing.

Mrs. Stanners, of Wayside, High Wycombe, was fatally injured when the accident occurred.

Mrs. Eliza Smith, of Alexander Road, High Wycombe, died early yesterday, and Mrs. S. E. Newell, of Wycombe Marsh, High Wycombe, succumbed to her injuries yesterday afternoon. All three women were over 70.

The only other person seriously injured was the driver of the car, Mr. Johnson, of High Wycombe, whose condition is stated to be the same.

COLLISION NEAR DOAGH.

THREE PERSONS SLIGHTLY INJURED

On Friday, at a road junction convenient to Doagh, a collision occurred between a private car, driven by Dr. Cole, Ravenhill Park, Belfast, and a milk van, driven by Mr. J. H. Gibson, Ballypallady, Doagh.

Dr. Cole, who is acting as locum tenens for Dr. F. G. Hill, Ballyclare, was proceeding from Doagh to Cogry at the time, and the milkvan was being driven in the opposite direction.

Dr. Cole and Mr. Gibson escaped with minor injuries, but a lad named Alex. Kirk, who was in the van with the latter, received facial injuries when he was thrown against the windscreen.

All three were treated by Dr. Dixon, Templepatrick.

Both vehicles were badly damaged.

EX-POLICE CHIEF

REMANDED UPON BAIL.

FRAUDULENT CONVERSION CHARGE.

Arrested at Seaford on Thursday, ex-Superintendent Albert Waghorn (58), who resigned from the East Sussex police in November, 1936, appeared at Lewes Police Court yesterday on several charges, and was remanded until next Thursday.

The charges were:—Having received the sum of £1,760 on November 27, 1936, on account of the East Sussex County Police Provident Friendly Society, unlawfully and fraudulently converted the same to his own use and benefit; on October 21, 1936, having received the sum of £33 16s 1d from James Horace Thirkell for and on behalf of the society, unlawfully and fraudulently converted same to his own use and benefit; on October 13, 1936, having received £10 11s from Walter Thomas Swainston, unlawfully and fraudulently converted said sum to his own use and benefit; on October 21, 1936, being a clerk and servant of the East Sussex County Police Provident Friendly Society, unlawfully and wilfully, with intent to defraud, omitted, or concurred in omitting, a material particular from the cash book of the society, to wit, a receipt of the sum of £33 16s 1d, from James Horace Thirkell, contrary to the Falsification of Accounts Act, 1875.

SUCCESSOR AS PROSECUTOR.

Waghorn appeared in the same court in which he formerly conducted prosecutions as superintendent of the Lewes Division. His successor, Superintendent Albert Holloway, prosecuted, on behalf of the Director of Public Prosecutions.

Superintendent Holloway said he saw Waghorn on Thursday at his home, Sharlett, Sherwood Road, Seaford. When first the warrant was read to him he said: "It is ridiculous."

Waghorn was taken to the police station while his solicitor endeavoured to find a second surety for bail.

MARK STAMPS WITH INVISIBLE INK.

LETTERS CASE IN SURREY.

WOMAN COMMITTED FOR TRIAL.

Reference to the receipt of anonymous letters by Wimbledon residents attacking borough Councillors during the last three or four years was made by the prosecuting counsel in a case at Wimbledon on Friday.

Miss Winifred Ava Simner, an elderly woman, of Queen Alexandra Court, Lake Road, Wimbledon, answered summonses alleging that she published defamatory libels concerning Councillor W. H. Russell in the form of letters addressed to the Mayor and Town Clerk of Wimbledon.

Mr. Morgan, for the Public Prosecutor, said that at first no notice was taken of these letters, but at last they became insupportable, and Scotland Yard was called in.

Suspicions became focussed on Miss Simner, and arrangements were made that when she purchased stamps at Wimbledon Post Office she should be supplied with stamps initialled by a detective sergeant in invisible ink.

On July 1 a paragraph appeared in a newspaper saying that Councillor W. H. Russell would probably be the next Mayor. That day Miss Simner bought four 1½d stamps which were marked with invisible ink. She stamped two half envelopes and they were collected specially by a postman from the box into which she placed them. The letters were addressed to the Mayor and Town Clerk.

Counsel said the letter to the Town Clerk stated that the burgesses protested against Councillor Russell being chosen Mayor, and alleged "extortions of money to own use on flag days," and added, "Russell must clear out and rob another district."

The letter addressed to the Mayor alleged a shortage of £48 on a Poppy Day collection.

After the summonses had been issued Miss Simner said, "Someone has done this to me Mr. Russell is my best friend."

Mr. Morgan said that the letter to the Mayor began, "Russell, too old and junior member of no brilliance except to cheat, and has no wife of social standing.'

Miss Jean Stratton, a woman police sergeant who gave evidence of Miss Simner purchasing stamps and posting letters, said on one occasion she (Stratton) wore a wig when watching.

Replying to Mr. Maude, for the defence, Chief Inspector Thompson said that Miss Simner had a distinguished War Office service during the war. She was 68.

Miss Simner, who pleaded not guilty and reserved her defence, was committed for trial, bail being allowed in her own recognisances of £50.

ANGLO-EIRE TRADE GROWTH.

BENEFITS OF THE PACT.

SOARING JUNE EXPORTS.

THE OFFICIAL RETURNS.

The trade returns for June last, the first full month for which returns are available since the Anglo-Eire agreement came into operation, show a marked increase in the Twenty Six Counties export trade to Great Britain and Northern Ireland.

The total trade of Eire for the twelve months ended June came to £65,720,173, as compared with £63,460,664 for the same period last year, but the adverse balance on this trade stands at the abnormally high figure of £21,173,105, the highest for the period for the past ten years. Imports for the year came to £43,446,639 and exports to £21,803,027.

For the month of June Eire's imports from Great Britain totalled £1,624,946, while exports to Great Britain from Eire for the month came to £2,060,168, an increase of nearly half a million as compared with June of last year, which is mainly due to the new trade agreement.

From Northern Ireland Eire imports came to £48,346 last month and exports to the value of £300,332. This increase of £88,904 in Eire exports across the Border is also mainly attributable to the effects of the Anglo-Eire pact.

In live stock the direct effects of the agreement on the trade of Eire are particularly marked. Fat cattle exported by Eire last month were valued at £247,448, as against only £53,785 for June, 1937. The total cattle exports for the month came to £981,715, as against £540,286 for the previous June. The exports of sheep, pigs, horses and poultry for the month rose to £1,214,770, as compared with £761,189 for June, 1937. All round a marked improvement in the export trade of the Twenty Six Counties is shown as a result of the agreement.

Outside Great Britain and Northern Ireland the only country to which Eire exported last month to any considerable extent was Germany. The value of the exports to that country came to £84,529, but imports from Germany reached the high figure of £115,871.

Australia, with which the Eire Government is now trying to negotiate a trade agreement, only bought goods to the value of £736 in June, while Australia sold Eire goods to the value of £70,613.

BOY'S CLOSE CALL.

BATHING AT BALLYCASTLE.

NURSEMAID DASHES TO RESCUE.

A boy visitor named Elliott, aged about 11 years, had a narrow escape from drowning at Ballycastle on Friday. The boy had been bathing at the Strand and got out of his depth, about 100 yards from the shore.

His cries for help attracted several people in the vicinity, including a nursemaid, who dashed into the water fully clothed and went to his rescue. A gentleman visitor also went to the rescue, and was followed by Mrs. Darling, Lurgan, and Dr. T. B. Pedlow, Lurgan, who is over 70 years of age.

The nursemaid, who, it appears, could not swim, was immersed up to her neck when she grasped the boy, and with the assistance of others managed to get him to the shore. She then walked off without her identity becoming known.

The boy, who was attended by Dr. Pedlow, was soon able to proceed. Both Mrs. Darling and Dr. Pedlow were loud in their praises of the nursemaid's plucky action.

Mrs. M'Guile, the elderly attendant at the bathing boxes, who witnessed the rescue, said she was attracted by loud cries and saw a young woman followed by a man and others dash to the rescue of the boy.

"Another half-minute and he would have disappeared," she said, adding that at the spot where the boy was bathing there was a strong flood tide.

THE EIRE ALCOHOL FACTORIES.

TRINITY PROFESSOR'S VIEW.

BAD ECONOMICALLY, HE HOLDS.

The last sitting of the Eire Senate elected under the new Constitution was held on Friday.

On the second stage of the Industrial Alcohol Bill Mr. Lemass, Minister for Industry and Commerce, said that the Bill was designed to hand over to a company the working of the alcohol factories. This step had been decided upon because Government concerns had not proved a success in the past. The Government was following the example of many other countries. It would provide employment and provide a market for potato growers, especially in black scab areas where sufficient potatoes were not available. Molasses from the sugar factories would be used. The total output of alcohol was estimated at one million gallons per annum. The all-in cost of production, including interest on capital, had been estimated at 2s 10½d per gallon. Production costs, however, depended on the cost of raw material, especially potatoes. The cost to the distributors would be 3s per gallon if production costs were 2s 10½d per gallon. The total amount expended on the construction and equipment of the factories to date was £266,000.

Mr. J. C. Douglas said that many people were sceptical as to the prospects of success of the undertaking.

Professor Johnston, T.C.D., said that the operation of the scheme, taking into account loss of revenue on the importation of petrol and the higher price to be paid by petrol consumers, could be capitalised at much more than £600,000. He was utterly opposed to the proposed economic policy as shown by industrial alcohol and similar schemes, because they were bad economically. He believed that the Minister would come round to his point of view when he had studied the Banking Commission Report. Until that was available he advised the Government not to embark on any further schemes. Already the nation's commitments had run into tens of millions of pounds. In the past bad economics had proved good politics, but the time would soon come when good economics would be good politics also.

Mr. Lemass, replying, said he was not dogmatic in his views regarding this enterprise. If the price of potatoes had been as high when the matter was discussed before the Bill was introduced, as it was now, the project might not have been started, but there was always the possibility that the world market price of potatoes would fall again and then the farmer living in those areas where the factories had been established would be very glad of the factories.

All the stages of the Bill were agreed to.

LOW DOWN CUNNING.

THORNTON'S REAL NAME TUELLMAN.

LIGHT ON A SHADY CAREER.

LIVED IN GOOD STYLE ON HIS WITS.

Sentence of seven years penal servitude was passed at Birmingham Assizes, yesterday, on John Bruce Thornton, who had been found guilty of the charges brought against him in the "Lord Nuffield Case."

There were four counts, charging him with possessing two automatic pistols, with intent to endanger life, inciting Major Arthur Geoffrey Francis Ramsden to conspire with him to kidnap Lord Nuffield, and inciting Ramsden to assault and imprison the motor magnate and force him to execute a letter of credit.

After a retirement of two hours the jury returned a verdict of guilty on all counts, and sentence was passed of seven years penal servitude on the first count, and the maximum of two years imprisonment with hard labour on each of the other counts—the sentences to run concurrently.

Before Mr. Justice Wrottesley passed sentence, Chief Constable Fox, of Oxford, told the Court that the prisoner's real name was Patrick Boyle Tuellman.

He was born at Dumfries, Scotland, on March 23, 1890, being the son of a German watchmaker, since deceased. His mother later regained her British nationality.

"He left school at the age of 15, and was respectively telegraph messenger, apprentice joiner and electrician.

"After working thus for about three years, he went to America. In November, 1915, he was engaged as a male nurse for an invalid at Blackpool.

"He thus became acquainted with a Miss Eileen Fish, a relative of his employer, and married her at Manchester in January, 1916, in the name of Jack Tuellman.

"The marriage was not a happy one. On July 7, 1917, he joined the Royal Garrison Artillery, and was discharged on January 5, 1918, with the rank of acting corporal, no longer physically fit for war service. His character was assessed as good.

"On January 26, 1918, he remarried the same woman at Birmingham, this time in the name of John Bruce Thornton."

The Judge—Had he been divorced?

Mr. Fox—No.

Chief Constable Fox went on to say that Thornton denied this at first, and then stated that he did it in order to change his German name, and to regularise matters regarding his Army allowance.

"This cannot be true," said Mr. Fox, "as he changed his name to Thornton on enlistment six months before, and had left the Army prior to his second marriage.

"From about 1920 he has lived in good style on his wits, and has done no work. He has owned good-sized yachts, and has been a member of a first-class yachting club.

"Large drafts have been traced as having been paid to him and, at the time of arrest, he was in possession of between £500 and £600.

"At one time he demanded the sum of £170,000 from a wealthy man. He received £40,000 or £50,000 from this source, which has included an annuity of £500 per annum as a condition that he caused no trouble.

"Payments of this ceased last year. It appears that, in this matter, Thornton sold incriminating documents and then produced photographs of them.

"He is low-down and cunning, a confirmed drunkard, and there is little that can be said in his favour."

In reply to the customary question, Thornton said he had nothing further to say before sentence of the Court was passed.

COUNSEL AND MAJOR RAMSDEN.

At the close of the case Mr. Cartwright Sharp, K.C., prosecuting counsel, rose to say that he wished to put right what he considered to be a very grave wrong.

At the Police Court there were serious suggestions against Major Ramsden. He was accused of having tried to obtain money by false pretences from a Lady Anson, and other charges of that nature were made.

The police had investigated this matter and it proved to be entirely a case of mistaken identity. Major Ramsden had submitted his fingerprints voluntarily to Scotland Yard and there was not a single thing of any discreditable nature against him.

Since the Police Court persons had been in the locality where Major Ramsden lived and had been circulating serious slanders about him. On one occasion Major Ramsden, who had been introduced in another name, was told by one of these people all kinds of discreditable things about himself.

Mr. Sharp said that the police had investigated all the allegations and nothing whatever to the discredit of Major Ramsden could be ascertained.

The Judge—It is only right that that should be said.

SHIPBUILDING PRICES

AT UNECONOMICAL PEAK.

KILL ORDER FOR TWO VESSELS.

Sir Edward Beatty and Lord Craigmyle issued the following statement:—

Following the 35th report of the Imperial Shipping Committee and discussions during and since the Imperial Conference in 1937, a draft agreement has been under consideration between the Canadian-Australasian Line and Governments of the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, and Fiji for the maintenance and improvement of the passenger and cargo service between Vancouver, Suva, Auckland, Sydney, and Melbourne.

The draft agreement provides for financial assistance from the interested Governments to the company for the construction in Great Britain of two new ships for the service designed to maintain the prestige of Empire shipping on the Pacific Ocean.

Plans and specifications for two new ships have been submitted by the company to selected shipbuilders and quotations for construction have been received by the company. Unfortunately shipbuilding prices have reached an uneconomical peak, and therefore, the company has decided that construction is impracticable for the present.

MURDER ATTEMPT CHARGE.

GLASGOW HUSBAND DETAINED.

William Dowie, a middle-aged man, appeared at Glasgow Police Court on the charge of the attempted murder of his wife in his home at 71 Hopehill Road, early yesterday. He was ordered to be detained until to-day for inquiry.

LONDON MAIL BAG ROBBERY

P.O. EMPLOYES ATTACKED.

Two Post Office employes carrying mail bags from Clapham Common Post Office to Venn Street Sub-Post Office, Clapham, were about to enter the sorting room of the Venn Street office when four men drove up in a high-powered saloon car and attacked them, wrenching the bags from the hands of one of the employes and re-entering the car, which moved off at a fast speed.

The mail bags contained 39 registered letters, but it is understood that the contents were not of any considerable value.

UNEMPLOYMENT IN EIRE.

Official returns issued in Dublin last evening showed the total unemployed in Eire for the week ended July 18 as 70,023, as compared with 70,896 for the previous week.

BELFAST INFANTICIDE CASE.

At the Belfast Commission yesterday, Lord Justice Best received a report from Miss Curran, a probation officer, who had been placed in charge of Mary S. Millar, Rockview Street, who had pleaded guilty to infanticide.

His Lordship said that in order that the woman could be kept under observation, he would sentence her to six months' imprisonment.

Two Vivid Stage Stories

"OLD MOTLEY." Audrey Lucas (Collins, 8s 6d).

MISS LUCAS has chosen two contrasting backgrounds for her story of early 19th century London; there is the Quaker household of a wealthy banker, and the Green Rooms of the theatre. The assurance with which she blends these diverse atmospheres and characterisations makes "Old Motley" a delightful novel.

It is the story of young Charles Baron, who goes against all the traditions of his Quaker family by becoming an actor. At the age of ten Charles had bullied and bribed his father's footman to take him to Drury Lane, and this solitary visit to a theatre was sufficient to determine him that an actor he would be or nothing.

His second contact with the stage was when Madame Vestris noticed him standing at her stage door and taking an interest in the little boy sent him away with instructions not to return until he was 18.

Years later this lucky meeting was to be the means of starting him on a meteoric career that culminated when his Romeo took London by storm. His rapid rise seems improbable, but stranger things happen every day in the world of the theatre.

DISOWNED AND PENNILESS.

He meets opposition from all quarters; from his father, a second Mr. Barrett, of Wimpole Street, and from Margaret herself, who had given up her own private happiness to prevent further friction between Charles and his unsympathetic parent. Finally he leaves home in the traditional style, disowned and penniless.

Along with the story of his childhood among the Friends, and career on the stage there is the story of his two love affairs, first with lovely worldly Rose for whose sake he was prepared to live in the fashionable world of Bryanston Square and go into the family bank, and later with Irish Kitty, a daughter of the Bohemian world to which he felt he really belonged.

Actual living characters of the period play a frequent part in the story, Madame Vestris, Charles Matthews, Macready, famous names in Drury Lane annals, and Count D'Orsay, the notorious dandy of the drawing rooms, and these personalities gave a note of authenticity to the narrative.

Although the period is a well worn one—Regency England—Miss Lucas has escaped the pitfall of overloading her scene with the antique, and "Old Motley" makes delightful reading that justifies the author's first venture into a "costume" piece.

★

THIS BOOK HAS A SWING.

"ALL THEIR CHILDREN WERE ACROBATS." Harry Hamilton (Hurst & Blackett, 3s 6d).

"ALL Their Children Were Acrobats" is also a book about the stage, but there the likeness to "Old Motley" ends. The Flying Flanagans have little in common with the historic traditions of Drury Lane, but their world of show boats, travelling troupes, and vaudeville is as real and vivid.

American humour often misses fire in England, but this book, with its fun and simplicity, has a swing that makes a very likeable story.

There is no false glitter of the footlights about the Flanagans, who are simple ordinary people doing their day's work with none of the glamour of the Man on the Flying Trapeze.

Unpretentiously written, with an economy of words, it is in an abrupt style, enlivened with American idiom that is well suited to a story of show people, but this apparent casualness does not hide a shrewd characterisation not always to be found in humorous novels.

The Doctor's Corner.

For Motorists

BEFORE a motoring holiday the exhaust system of the car should be carefully examined. Exhaust gas contains carbon monoxide and escape of this into the car gives rise to symptoms of poisoning. The driver and passengers may thus suffer from headache, dizziness and tiredness after a long drive.

If the escape is serious, drowsiness and eventually unconsciousness are likely to develop. Carbon monoxide cannot be detected by smell, but the presence of the symptoms mentioned after driving should always rouse suspicion of poisoning by this gas.

Make sure also that the driving seat is properly adjusted. A faulty driving position is a common cause of backache.

The Shuttle

Six-Minute Story No. 8: by Dave Marlow

WHAT did I care if I did have to peel potatoes on this old Dutch cargo boat? Every thud of her ancient engines, each turn of her old screws, brought me nearer to home and England.

Happily I stabbed another tuber and dug out its eyes. London, Hampstead Heath, a pint of old and mild, fish and chips, the old folks. What a time I was going to have!

I carried the bowl of peeled potatoes into the galley and dumped them into a large boiler of water simmering on the stove.

"What you lookin' so happy about?" The cook, a complacent-looking man, wiped his hands on his greasy apron and regarded me with solemn brown eyes.

"Why shouldn't I look happy? I'm going home ain't I?'

* * *

HE continued to look at me evidently turning my words over in his head.

"How long since you bin home?"

"Eleven years. That's long enough."

He nodded slowly. "Long time," he agreed.

I offered him a cigarette, and we used the glowing tip of the poker for a match.

"Been in this one long, Cookie?" He spat a fragment of tobacco from his lips. "Me?" A slow grin lifted one corner of his mouth. "'Bout three, nearly four years now, I guess."

"Good or not, I've got to stick her."

"Yes," I commiserated, "things is tough all right these days, 'specially if you got a wife and kid."

He continued to smile. "I'm not married.'

Pushing back his semi-white hat he rubbed his eye.

* * *

"THIS job's sticking to me, not me to the job," he said, his eyes twinkling.

"How'd ya mean?"

He threw a handful of salt into the potatoes and stirred them with a long wooden spoon.

"I ain't got a country,' he said.

I frowned at him. I was no gullible fool. I prided myself on my worldly manner. A man without a country!

"What are you then, a thrown back dog-fish?"

"No," he answered. "You see its like this. My old man came from Central Europe. During the war he deserted and took my mother and myself to Holland. He was too scared to register there and when I was old enough I went to sea.

"I 'jumped' in New York. I had a hell of a time. Nearly starved to death until the 'cops' picked me up at last and slung me on to Ellis Island. I said I came from Holland, so they put me on this old hooker and sent me there."

"Wait a minute," I protested. "You said you didn't have a country"

"When I got to Amsterdam," he continued, blandly ignoring my interruption, "they had no record of me, so back I went to New York. Same thing all over again.

"After two trips the Old Man said he wasn't carrying me for ballast, so I took this job on."

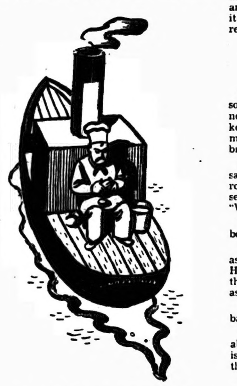
"You're right. I'm on the island every time in New York, and stay aboard in Holland."

"Well, I'm damned!"

"One trip in New York," the cook went on, "they got so fed up with me that I was told to beat it, and I had the devil's own job to get back to this 'meal-ticket' again. I should lose the only job I've ever been able to keep—and in a kitchen at that! I don't think!"



Back sitting beside the sack of potatoes I mulled this story over. Was he sprucing me or not?

A picture of a rainy afternoon in my childhood came back to me.

Crouched in a dusty attic by the faint light from the skylight glad that no one could see my unmanly tears, I had read the story of another man without a country. The pathos of it had always haunted me, making me resentful now.

* * *

IT was an old American classic, about a soldier condemned by the courts for treason never to see his native land again. He was kept on a warship far from home, his shipmates never spoke of it and he died from a broken heart.

I could even remember the scene of the sailors sitting on deck in the evening light reciting poetry to each other. One, more sensitive than his mates spoke in his turn. "Where is the man with soul so dead——"

There had been an abashed silence as a bowed figure silently left the circle.

An uncle of mine was a sailor, and I had asked him to recite some of the sailors' poetry. He had nearly choked and had to be taken into the front parlour. Mother said it was his asthma.

I finished another bowl of potatoes and went back into the galley.

"Listen, Cookie,' I said, "that's all right about keeping the job, but it's a bit rotten, isn't it, at times? After all, we all like to think we belong somewhere."

He laid down his wooden spoon and clapped me on the shoulder.

"Listen, son," he said. "If you remember, I told you my people came from Central Europe. I'm satisfied!"

SURNAME SIDELIGHTS

Brewster

THERE is no doubt that it was the women who first began to brew. The occupation gave us two surnames. The most familiar is Brewster. The rarer is Browster, and this was almost wholly Scottish in origin, being merely a simplified form of browster which also indicated a woman brewer.

Indeed, it is Scottish evidence which is strongest for both surnames. Thus, Sir John Skene defines a browster, as a woman who brews ale to be sold. The matter is further settled in old Scotch law which lays it down that, "gif she makes gule all that is sufficient. Bot gif she make evil all she shall pay aucht shillinges or shall be put upon the cockstule, and the ail shall be distributed to the pure folke."

Besides this there is a famous entry in the Kirk Session Records of a "browster wife" who got into serious trouble for selling her brews "in tyme of preaching" and for running what we should call a night club nowadays.

After which it is strange perhaps to recall that William Brewster was one of the most famous of the Pilgrim Fathers. He was the King's Master of the Post at Scrooby, but his faith gave him another career, and it is said, in chronicles of the Mayflower that "the cheerful, strong face of William Brewster was with the Pilgrims for over 20 years, till in 1643, with his white hair and his mellow face, honoured and loved by all the people, he died."

Strange, too, to note that a Norfolk Brewster was a divine whom Oliver Cromwell sent to Ireland. Carlyle calls him one of our spiritual grandfathers, while the Milton State Papers pay tribute to his fervent zeal, faith and fearlessness.

Scotland produced Sir David Brewster, who was born at Jedburgh and educated at Edinburgh and was principal of that university for nearly ten years. He it was who invented the Kaleidoscope and made Wheatstone's stereoscope practical, and, as all Scots folk know, he had a pretty wit.

* * * *

Then Sir Walter Scott reminds us of the Brewsters who lived near him. "Met my agreeable and lady-like neighbour, Mrs. Brewster, on my pony," he enters in his diary, "and I was actually ashamed to be seen by her . . . on so poor a steed . . . I believe detestable folly of this kind is the very last that leaves us."

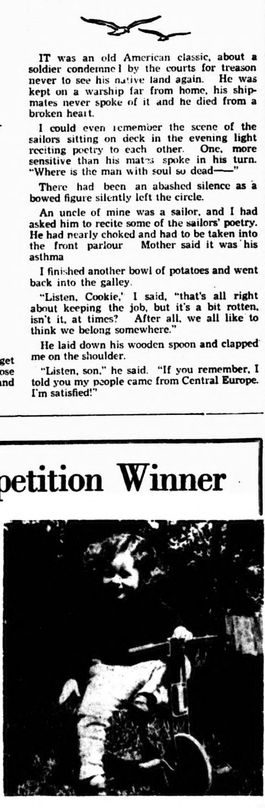
Yet though Broster, or Browster is a Scottish form of Brewster it is intriguing to find that the Brewsters have flourished in Scotland as well as in the South, whereas, Broster is extremely rare in Scotland, but has been the surname of landed gentry in Cheshire and Derbyshire for several generations.

NEXT WEEK — FOX

Competition Winner

ENTRANT of this week's prize-winning snap in our Happy Childhood Photograph Competition is Miss Queenie Dillon, of 20 Melrose Street, Lisburn Road, Belfast.

She receives the half-guinea prize awarded each week for the happiest picture. Entries for next week's competition should reach us not later than first post on Wednesday, July 27. Address them to "Child Photograph Competition," Belfast Telegraph Royal Avenue, Belfast, and enclose a stamped addressed envelope if you want your print returned.



A PLAIN MAN'S SERMON

For The Merciful, Mercy

THE blessing which Christ has pronounced upon the merciful is that they themselves shall obtain mercy.

Speaking for myself, I find that I am never able to forget when dealing with my fellow-men—and still more with the helpless dumb animals—that the day may come when I shall need mercy to be shown to myself. There come to mind also signal mercies which have been shown to me in the past. For both these reasons I try never to do to any of my fellow-creatures, whether human or animal, what I would not like to be done to myself.

When one reads, as one continually does, of some act of inhuman cruelty perpetrated upon a dumb animal, one cannot help wondering how it could have been possible for the person who did it never once to have asked himself how he would like the same thing to be done to himself.

Yet there can be no doubt that there are large numbers of people to whom this obvious thought never occurs.

TO FIT THE CRIME

ONE sometimes wishes that it were possible to make the punishment fit the crime of those who in the courts are convicted of cruelty, and that they could be made somehow to realise, even a little, what the suffering is like which they have been inflicting on some creature which was at their mercy.

But nearly always the case ends with the imposition of some trifling and ridiculously inadequate fine upon people who have been proved to have been guilty of simply satanic cruelty.

There can be very little doubt that, as a nation, the British are less cruel than any other people in the world; but for some reason their natural kindheartedness has failed to find anything like adequate expression in the law of the land as to the penalties for cruelty.

We can record with a great deal of thankfulness a certain amount of improvement in the matter of kindness to animals. They have benefited by the spread of education and by modern inventions, such as the internal combustion engine, which has taken off our roads thousands of overloaded, over-driven and ill-treated horses, who dragged out their weary lives there in former days.

The mechanisation of the Army means, also, that in future thousands of horses will escape the ghastly sufferings which war has inflicted in the past on these splendid friends of man.

A NEW KIND OF EVIL

TO counterbalance this mitigation of cruelty, however, one hears of a new kind of evil in the shape of grossly ill-treated horses hired out indiscriminately by some of the less reputable jobbing stables in response to the demand for hacks resulting from the latest vogue—learning to ride.

Steps are being taken, rightly, to introduce legislation to put a stop to what some of our best-known horsemen do not hesitate to describe as "a disgrace to the country."

The export of worn-out horses to the Continent still continues, and although it is now supposed to be under strict supervision, this does not really meet the case. The horrors of a voyage across the North Sea remain, and there is no protection for them against what may be done to them in Belgian slaughterhouses.

Nothing but insisting that they shall be mercifully killed before they leave our shores can ever save them from the possibility of nameless suffering.

DON'T FORGET YOUR DOG!

THERE seems to be evidence of a steady growth in the spirit of kindness amongst people, and, no doubt, cruelty now evokes more sympathy for its victims and more indignation against the perpetrators of it than it used to do.

All this is to the good; and it is surely true that nothing is a more accurate index of the moral level of a nation than its treatment of dumb animals, and that a low standard of national character will be found to go hand in hand with callous indifference to their sufferings.

Nevertheless there is still, unfortunately, enough cruelty perpetrated, even in Britain, to make one feel sick at heart and long for the day when human beings will at last learn to do to dumb animals as they would be done by.

There are still far too many dogs kept on the chain for the greater part of their lives; and it may be as well to mention here that to keep a dog on the chain for more than a certain number of hours during the day, is now illegal.

The holiday season means that once again hundreds of so-called "pets"—what a ridiculous mockery to call them by this name!—will be abandoned and left to starve by people who simply lock up the house, go away to enjoy themselves, leaving their animals to their fate. Incredible if it were not all too true!

★

EXTRAORDINARY DELUSION

NO doubt much cruelty is due to ignorance and want of imagination; and to the extraordinary popular delusion that "animals do not feel."

Which reminds us that there is very much that we can all do to remedy the evil of cruelty. Whenever we see anything cruel being done, we can ask the perpetrator whether he would like the same thing done to himself. It is astonishing to discover how often this obvious question appears to come as an entirely new thought to people.

Especially can we help by checking any signs of cruelty in children. Children have lively imaginations, and an impression is easily made on them. They are always able to realise vividly how they would feel if some giant were to seize them and do to them exactly what they are doing to some helpless animal.

It is only because they have never thought of this that they are cruel.

REV. L. B. ASHBY.

TIRING ENGLISH BOWLERS

BEFORE HITTERS' ADVENT

The second morning of the fourth Test match at Leeds produced another marathon crawl. Just as England struggled for runs yesterday so did Australia to-day.

DON BRADMAN'S MEN BEGAN THE DAY ONLY 191 RUNS BEHIND WITH ONE WICKET DOWN AND FINGLETON AND BARNETT PROCEEDED TO ENDEAVOUR TO TIRE THE ENGLAND BOWLERS BEFORE THE HITTERS CAME IN.

Both Bowes and Wright bowled without the least degree of luck, for they often beat the bat, and 85 minutes elapsed to-day before England claimed a wicket.

Then with 55 added to the overnight score Verity bowled Fingleton, who altogether spent over two hours getting a laborious 30.

Bradman changed the character of the cricket and made some sparking hits, while Barnett, the left-hander, easily surpassed his previous best in a Test Match by scoring 57.

By lunchtime Australia appeared to be approaching a very strong position, for they required 96 runs for the lead with seven wickets in hand.

GREAT CROWD FOR TO-DAY

Friday's happenings in the fourth Test at Leeds left no pleasant memories for the England players. From all accounts nothing in the condition of the wicket could form an excuse for the dismissal of the England team for 223 runs.

Australia, with only Brown out and 32 runs already scored were entitled to be optimistic about their prospects of winning and so retaining the "Ashes," whatever the result of the Oval.

The Teams.

Hardstaff.	B. A. Barnett.
Verity.	M. G. Waite.
Wright.	W. J. O'Reilly.
Price.	L. O'B. Fleetwood-Smith.
Bowes.	E. L. M'Cormick.

Twelfth men:—N. W. D. Yardley (England), and S. Barnes (Australia).

Queues stretching for three-quarters of a mile around three sides of the ground indicated a big crowd to-day. Spectators were admitted as early as half-past eight, and two hours later there must have been 20,000 people present.

Women spectators are always more numerous at Headingley than on any other ground in the country where Tests are played. To-day scores of them could be seen busily knitting to while away the time before the start.

By the look of the weather another full day's cricket was promised, although the sun was obscured.

Some of the Australians had a knock up without nets.

The crowd was larger by 3,000 or 4,000 over that which assembled on the opening day, when the receipts from ground admission charges only were £2,088 and not £2,888 as first stated. The income from the sale of reserved seat tickets was roughly £4,300.

BAD LIGHT AT START.

The light became worse, and was only just fit for cricket when England resumed the attack through Bowes. Australia were 191 behind, with Fingleton nine and Barnett one. The over produced a single to leg by Barnett, who took another off the first ball delivered by Farnes. The Essex bowler, without a sight-screen behind him, could not have been too easy to see in the dull light.

Bowes, who on Friday bowled too much outside the off-stump, now attacked the wicket and made the batsmen play him. He also tried bowling round the wicket to left-hander Barnett, but only for one over. Both the Yorkshireman and Farnes developed top pace quickly, and runs were difficult to get. Charles Barnett cut off one stroke from his namesake which would have been a four but for the fieldsman's anticipation and speed.

When Bowes changed ends and bowled with only one slip and two men in the gully he quickly lured Fingleton into a snicked stroke. The ball dropped just short of the wicket-keeper, an escape that started a buzz of excitement among the packed crowd. Wright at once found his length, and got one ball to beat Fingleton's bat without touching the wicket.

Barnett hit a no-ball from Wright to the boundary, but there were few signs of aggression in the batting. Australia had added 36 in an hour when Verity went on as the fourth and last of England's recognised bowlers. Occasionally Fingleton mistimed Bowes, who appealed more than once for l.b.w. The weather brightened a lot, but not so the batting.

Australia's purpose was the building-up of a big total, and they went about the task in solid, determined style. Wright still had the fault of no-balling, and when he gave Bowes a rest Barnett hit two 4's in the first over.

FINGLETON BOWLED.

England badly needed a wicket, and at 87 Fingleton took a risk with Verity, tried to hook him and was bowled. A tremendous shout from the onlookers greeted this success against a resolute batsman who had been in over two hours for 30 runs.

Enter Bradman, scorer of over 300 runs in each of his two pervious tests at Headingley. Two of the defensive strokes he made off Verity before he scored must have been heartening to the bowlers. One was off the edge and the other lifted towards cover. Hammond left on Verity to deal with the master batsman and placed Edrich in the position of silly mid-off.

It was altogether an "attacking" field and Bradman was in for twelve minutes before getting off the mark with a late cut for three.

Barnett to all appearances was completely at ease with Wright's bowling. He ran out a four for Bradman, who made his ground easily, contrary to what some of the onlookers thought. The turnstiles were closed before one o'clock.

BARNETT REACHES HIS 50.

Australia's first 100 was reached after two hours and 25 minutes and Bradman greeted the return of Bowes with two off drives for four from successive balls. By this time Barnett had put together his highest innings against England and with a four to leg off Farnes he reached 50 in under two hours. His certainty of timing and strokes came as ample proof that the pitch was playing true.

But in the last over before lunch, with Farnes putting plenty of "shoulder" into his deliveries, Barnett got a "touch" and Price held his first catch as wicket-keeper in a Test Match.

M'Cabe had to go in for the last four balls of the over, two of which struck his pads.

THE JOURNAL OF ARCHÆOLOGY.

Part two, which completes the first volume of the revised Ulster Journal of Archæology has just been published.

In December last the first part of the volume was issued and received very gratifying support. This will have to be continued and new subscribers obtained if the object of the society of publishing a [illegible] and better journal is to be attained.

The annual subscription is 10s, single numbers 6d, and application should be made to the hon treasurer, Mr. S. D. T[illegible], Helen's Bay, Co. Down.

There is plenty of material in hand. If afforded the support that they [illegible] the society have every hope of the publication's future.

The current issue contains articles by [illegible] V. Gordon Childe, D.Litt., D[illegible] F.S.A.; Messrs. Ivor Herring, O. Dav[illegible] M. Barcroft, H. C. Lawlor, M.A., M.R.I.A.; E. E. Evans, Basil Megaw, Lady Dorothy Lowry-Corry, Mrs. Nora Fisher M'Millan and others.

These contributors cover every branch of local archæological activity in detail and the permanent record thus available is invaluable.

HAMMOND COULD DO WITH HIM.

Playing for Omagh Mental Hospital against Omagh Military Depot at Omagh yesterday, Hugh Coyle in three overs took eight wickets for one run. At one time he had five wickets for no runs, and had two "hat tricks" in three overs.

BELFAST CINEMAS.

ROUND OF ATTRACTIVE PROGRAMMES

CLASSIC.

Katharine Hepburn and Cary Grant star in the rousing straight comedy, "Bring Up Baby," an assembly of side-splitting situations skilfully knitted into a continuous story and showing how successful is the combination of the two stars in this type of film. Gloria Stuart and Michael Whalen star in the supporting feature, "Change of Heart."

ROYAL.

A story of Hollywood studio life called "Once a Hero" heads the programme at the Royal Cinema. Richard Dix and Fay Wray are the stars, and the plot has life, laughter, romance, and pathos built around the tragedy of a silent star ruined by talkies. In support will be "Woman Against the World," featuring Ralph Forbes and Alice Moore. Two news reels complete a grand programme.

RITZ THEATRE.

Greta Garbo stars in the Napoleonic romance, "Marie Walewska" at the Ritz next week. Charles Boyer plays the part of the Corsican, and Miss Garbo in the title role is the beautiful countess who forsakes husband and home in an attempt to win over Napoleon and thus save her country from ruin by his armies.

CRUMLIN PICTURE HOUSE.

"The Case of the Stuttering Bishop," a melodramatic murder story, heads the programme at the Crumlin on Monday with Donald Woods as a particularly shrewd detective. Six people are suspected of the murder, and romance comes in via Anne Nagel, granddaughter of the murdered man. The week-end feature will be "Sky's the Limit," an aerial drama. The usual extras will be in each programme.

AMUSEMENTS AT A GLANCE.

TOUR OF BELFAST HOUSES.

The Picture House will show "High Flyers" (Wheeler and Woolsey) and "Saturday's Heroes." The Imperial has Richard Cromwell and Helen Mack in "The Wrong Road," supported by Gene Autry in "Serenade of the West." At the Troxy next week the features will be—Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, "Live, Love, and Learn," and for the week-end "The Women Men Marry" and "The Golden Trail." The Windsor will show all week "Broadway Melody of 1938," starring Eleanor Powell and Robert Taylor. The Coliseum will feature during early week "Jericho" (Paul Robeson), with "Devil's Saddle Legion" (Dick Foran) on Thursday. "Fight for Your Lady" and "Forty Naughty Girls" are at the Regal on Monday, with "Breakfast for Two" and "Flight from Glory" on Thursday. The Curzon will screen "Lancer Spy" and "Dangerously Yours" during early week, followed by "It's Love I'm After" and "S.O.S. Clipper Island." The Clonard has "Midnight Taxi," supported by "The Great Hospital Mystery," on Monday, with the Dionne Quins in "Hearts in Exile" at the week-end. "Think Fast, Mr. Moto" and "Passenger to London" are announced at the Savoy for the first part of the week and "Bad Guy" for the week-end. At the Forum Arthur Tracy will be seen on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday in "Command Performance," supported by "Behind the Mike." On Thursday comes "Armoured Car," a gangster thriller. The Lyceum will show "Ever Since Eve" and "Empty Holsters" on Monday, and "Mutiny of the Elsinore" and "Expensive Husbands" on Thursday. The first sea story in natural colour, "Ebb Tide," will be screened at the Capitol, supported by "Thunder Trail." The Strand and Majestic are showing "Big Town Girl" and "S.O.S. Clipper Island" on Monday, with "I'll Take Romance" and "Federal Bullets" at the week-end. The Picturedrome has "Ladies in Love" for early week, with five big stars in the cast; and for the latter three days of the week "Fair Warning," a thriller. At the Park on Monday will be shown "Bulldog Drummond Comes Back" and "Partners in Crime," and on Thursday "Spring Handicap" and "Texas Serenade." Tonic early-week feature is "Music for Madame," and later "I'll Take Romance" and "Paid to Dance." The Alhambra shows on Monday "It's Love I'm After" and on Thursday "San Quentin." "Sky Devils," a great air film, is at the Duncairn for early week, with "Jericho" and "The Lady Fights Back" later. The Castle shows "God's Country and the Woman" on Monday, and "The Devil is Driving" at the week-end. At the Apollo all week will be Deanna Durbin in "100 Men and a Girl," supported by "The Man Who Cried Wolf." The Stadium screens "The Singing Marine" on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, and "Back in Circulation" at the week-end. The Astoria offers "That Certain Woman" for the first half of the week, with Bette Davis starring.

BELFAST OPERA HOUSE.

RE-OPENS WITH VARIETY SHOW.

The Belfast Opera House re-opens on Monday, August 1, with a twice-nightly variety show. A number of the leading stars of vaudeville will figure on the programme, which promises a cheerful holiday treat. The front parterre prices will range from 2s to 2s 4d (instead of 2s 10d). The back parterre will be unchanged at 10d, and the admission to the other parts of the theatre also remain as before.

THE BELFAST PLAYHOUSE.

"AUCTION IN KILLYBUCK."

At the moment when the thermometer is registering its highest, and when theatres and indoor entertainments seem somewhat out of order, "The Auction in Killybuck" continues to pack the Playhouse nightly. The famous comedy appears to have strengthened its grip on the Belfast public, who never seem to tire of its eccentricities and its humours.

But for Mr. Norway's policy of staging Ulster and Irish plays his patrons might never have had the opportunity of seeing this great classic in Bedford Street, and he deserves every encouragement for his breadth of outlook, which gives Irish authors, no matter what their doctrine or theme may be, a hearing under the best conditions. The Players having got thoroughly acclimatised to the Playhouse, are now giving perhaps the best performance the play has ever had, and after two weeks run it goes particularly smoothly with one long laugh from start to finish.

Messrs. Dempster, Creen, Blaney, Devlin M'Keown are among Ulster's finest comedians; each lives his part Kathleen Rea and Elizabeth M'Keown are both admirably suited to parts which demand the highest skill and ingenuity.

NEW TROUBLE IN JAMAICA.

THREAT OF LAND SEIZURE.

The Government of Jamaica is preparing to deal with any outbreaks of lawlessness on August 1, the centenary of the emancipation of slaves in the British Empire.

It has recently been reported in well-informed circles that the peasants in certain districts of the island are buying large quantities of barbed wire to enclose land which they intend to seize from the larger privately-owned properties on that day. The land they appear to believe has belonged to them from the time of the abolition of slavery

The Acting Governor, Mr. C. C. Woolley, has issued a warning by means of placards freely displayed all over the country that drastic steps will be taken to prevent attempts at trespass

Special constables are being trained to assist the regular police in case of emergency.

GOSSIP FROM PRESS.

WOOLLEY'S FAREWELLS.

REALLY GREAT CRICKETER.

LONDON, Saturday.

Frank Woolley, I see, has now put an end to persistent rumours that he was thinking of playing for Kent again next season. He is wise to go while his batting retains so much of its old glory, instead of waiting on till it is in its decline. It would, in any case, be rather difficult for Woolley to go on in view of the farewell demonstrations he has been given up and down the country. At the Oval this week, E. R. T. Holmes collected the Surrey players round Woolley to give a round of cheers when he finished his last innings on that ground. Tonbridge, where he was born, and Tunbridge Wells have said goodbye to him. To-day it is the turn of Maidstone. Unlike some singers, a cricketer can make only one farewell tour.—"Peterborough" in the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post."

VILLERS-BRETONNEUX.

The King's speech at Villers-Bretonneux yesterday came over well on the wireless. He spoke for something over five minutes. From the clearness of his voice and delivery, it was evident that he had not suffered from the activities of his strenuous three days. The King, by the way, spoke only in English. The commentator was less happy. French Army bands share the elan of the poilu. In consequence, I heard more of Schubert's "Marche Militaire" than of Mr. S. J. de Lotbinier's broadcast. We have been smiling at the phonetic versions of "God Save the King" prepared for the Royal visit. Their efficacy was evident from the excellent interpretation of the National Anthem at the ceremony yesterday. Except for the rolling of the "R's" it might have come from British throats.—"Peterborough," in the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post."

EIGER.

Two climbing parties are attempting to climb the Eiger by unconquered North Face. Mountain is one of Jungfrau group, and is 13,039 feet high. Popular explanation of name is that it means an "ogre." As early as 1806, story was told of Englishman who had sworn to conquer peak, and had actually done so and lighted fire on top, but never returned. Unsubstantiated. Peak first mentioned in 1252 as boundary, under name of Mons Egere. For many years shared with Matterhorn terrible reputation as inaccessible and dangerous peak. —"News-Chronicle."

WHAT MORE COULD HE DO?

A husband, who pleaded guilty at Southend to assaulting his wife, was asked by the magistrates if he could do something to make conditions in the home a little more cheerful.

He replied—"What more can a man do than stay at home and mind the baby while his wife goes out courting with other fellows?"

He was bound over for twelve months.

ALLAM'S PIG SALES.

Yesterday Messrs. R. J. Allam, Limited, held their weekly sale of live fat sows and boars in the Oxford Mart, Oxford Street, Belfast.

There was a larger entry totalling 78 sows and one boar. With a full attendance of local buyers and exporters trade ruled firm for quality York sows at from 38s to 42s, and for softer and rougher sows 36s to 38s.

A few of the best weights and prices recorded were:—5cwt. 1 qr. 14lbs., £11 10s (42s 9d); 4c. 2q 14lbs., £9 15s (42s 3d); 6c. 1q., £13 (41s 9d); 5c. 1q., £11 (41s 9d); 4c. 1q. 14lbs., £8 12s (41s 6d); 3c. 3q., £7 15s (41s 3d); 4c. 3q., £9 15s (41s); 4c. 0q. 14lbs., £8 8s (40s 9d); 4c. 1q., £8 12s (40s 6d); 3c. 3q., £7 11s (40s 3d). Three sows 10c. 3q., £21 10s (40s).

T[illegible] for sows was £13 and for [illegible] 10s.

THE 29TH IN "KINGDOM OF ELY."

SCOUTS AS MINISTERS.

KNOCKBREDA BOYS IN AYR.

Some seven miles outside Enniskillen, on the road towards Belleek, are hand-carved directional arrows, erected at intervals along the road. These, if followed, lead to a post on which is the sign "15" in figures of lashed beech twigs. A commanding arrow points into the wood towards a path which meanders pleasingly along, flanked by trees of ash, beech, oak and by wild flowers. The path crosses a stream by means of a pioneer bridge, passes under an archway, and just beyond the camp comes into view. The tents, set in crescent fashion amidst a clearing of trees, the wood-clad islands which stud the glistening waters of Lough Erne, are framed in the entwining branches: an unforgetable scene.

Here is being held the twenty-ninth annual camp of the 15th Belfast Scout Group, under the leadership of A.D.C. J. Quigley, assisted by A.S.M. N. Kelly and A.S.M. S. Simpson.

The camp, called the "Kingdom of Ely," is organised on lines similar to those of a composite country, more idealistic perhaps, since unselfishness is the underlying note everywhere. The government is composed of all the Scouts acting as Cabinet Ministers, each being directly responsible for the carrying out of a special job throughout camp.

Carved logs bearing the names 10 Downing Street, Mayfair, Park Lane, etc., erected at each tent denote the residences of the "Prime Minister" and other "Ministers."

Everywhere camp gadgets testify to the enthusiasm which has been put into them. There are bridges, fences, tables, chairs, shoe racks; in fact, almost everything that deft fingers can produce from wood and rope.

In the camp itself, tennikoit, cricket, and football are all played, while a library provides literary entertainment. The woods and surrounding country have been explored thoroughly in the hikes, and a tour to Sligo proved very interesting. When the camp breaks up on July 25, the regrets of everyone will be tempered with many happy memories of camp life at Enniskillen.

NEAR BATTLEFIELD OF LARGS.

The 42nd Belfast (Knockbreda Parish) returned to Belfast this afternoon after having spent a most enjoyable fortnight's camp at Harplaw, Largs, Ayrshire.

Leaving Belfast on Saturday afternoon, July 9, they arrived at Largs about ten o'clock the same evening, being met by representatives of the Largs branch of Toc H, who entertained them to supper and loaned their hall for sleeping accommodation for the night.

Next morning they settled into camp at Harplaw, having as their neighbours the Greenisland and Ballymacash Troops. Friendships were soon established among the members of the Group and members of the Toc H and Largs Scouts, who were frequent visitors to the camp.

On Wednesday, July 13, the Group spent the entire day at the Empire Exhibition. Sunday morning, 17th, the entire Group paraded to Largs Parish Church, accompanied by A.S.M. W. D. Cowan, of the Largs Troop, and in the afternoon, with A.S.M. Cowan as leader, a number of Scouts went mountain climbing. Soon after the start the party was enveloped in a "Scotch mist," but good time was made, however, and they reached their objective, Greta Falls, in about 1½ hours. The return home was by an easier route.

Members of the Toc H and other friends were the guests of the Group at the camp on Monday. During the evening the 42nd played and were winners in a cricket match with the Toc H. An enjoyable programme was brought to a close by the lighting of the Toc H lamp.

In co-operation with the local troop, the 42nd acted as stewards, etc., at a fete held in aid of the Largs Infirmary.

On Friday afternoon camp was broken and all gear removed to the Toc H hall, where the Group was entertained. Sleeping accommodation was again provided to enable the Group to depart next morning without undue rush.

The return to-day via Ardrossan daylight service brought this happy camp to a close, but the memories retained will long augment those of former camps.

In all, over thirty members were at camp, under Scoutmaster Walter A. Brown, assisted by Cubmaster John P. Busby, Assistant-Scoutmaster James Davis, and Rover Scout John M'Callum.

SCOUTING PARADISE.

48th Belfast Boy Scouts camped at Brynbach, Denbigh, North Wales. They left Belfast, a party of over thirty, in pouring rain, having marched to the boat from their headquarters. After a rough crossing they arrived at Liverpool and reached Chester in time to see their connection for Denbigh move out of the station. Thus was kept intact the 48th record for missing boats and trains.

Captain Anderson, camp warden at Denbigh, gave the boys the most exciting ride of their lives to Brynbach.

From first appearances Brynbach looked the perfect camp site, and having spent a week there the 48th unanimously say it is. With tons of firewood, plenty of water, a boating lake, and swimming pool, it is a Scouts' paradise.

Cooking was carried out on patrol system, and special credit was paid to Patrol-Leaders W. Kerr, V. Rea, W. Cunningham, and Alfred Dunn, who worked like Trojans and only required an occasional direction by the Scouters. P.-L. Cunningham gained his First-Class Badge, King Scout Badge, and First-Grade All-Round Cords on the eve of the troop's departure for camp.

On Sunday the troop attended church parade to St. James's Church, Prion, where the service was taken by Rev. Lewis Williams. A visit was paid to Rhyl, but most days were spent in scouting, swimming, and boating.

Camp fires were held at night by the camp warden and the 48th. English and Welsh Scouts were greatly entertained by an item given by Scout Tom Geddis, and called for it at every camp fire.

A.S.M. Tom English sang Irish songs, as the English and Welsh boys preferred these.

1st Bangor Troop is having a splendid time at Colwyn Bay where the boys are holding their annual summer camp under Scoutmaster H. M'Garry and Assistant Scoutmaster S. Templeton. As the Bangor boys did not leave home until Friday last week their holiday has not been marred by the bad weather experienced by earlier campers, and they are revelling in real summer conditions. The party, numbering over 20, will return home on Tuesday.

BULL ON THE RAMPAGE.

Carlisle Memorial boys (46th Belfast) had unlooked-for excitement at the conclusion of their holiday. On the day previous to departure for home a bull got loose in their camping ground and left a trail of destruction before it could be captured and led away.

Twenty-six Scouts of the 22nd (Loopland) Troop had a very successful camp at Aughengillan, Stirlingshire. On Sunday they attended a Scouts' own service, at which a very interesting address was given by the Rev. W. A. Kennedy, 9th Belfast Troop. In company with the Kingstown (Dublin) Troop they spent a happy day at the Empire Exhibition. On Tuesday the 22nd took part in the novel "Twelfth" celebrations held by the hundreds of Ulster Scouts at the camp. Dunoon was visited on Thursday, the troop travelling via Glasgow and steamer down the Clyde. The afternoon was spent boating on Holy Loch and rambling on the shore. The camp was under the charge of District Scoutmaster J. M'Lardy and A.S.M. J. Doherty, with the assistance of Patrol-Leaders J. Hanna, W. Wilson, Roy M'Mullan, and Charles Spence.

FINANCIAL REVIEW

WALL STREET STIMULUS

CHEERFUL FEELING IN MARKETS

HOME RAILWAYS SLUMP

LONDON, Friday Night.—In the past week the tone of the markets of the London Stock Exchange has been quite cheerful, though business has been active only in the case of a comparatively few of the more speculative issues.

Stimulus has been provided by the somewhat uncertain, but on the whole more optimistic, conditions of Wall Street, and the improvement in the American output of steel, it being stated that the U.S.A. mills are now operating at 36 per cent. of capacity as against 32 per cent. last week.

It is a curious feature of the markets that while commodity prices and industrial ordinary shares have risen, there has also been a persistent demand for Gilt-edged stocks. The explanation can only be that while there is more confidence in the prospects for industry it is not yet sufficient to induce any very considerable body of investors to switch from Gilt-edged stocks to equities.

After some initial profit taking declines British Government stocks have met with further demand and mostly show some improvement on the week.

Home Railways, on the other hand, have slumped heavily following the halving of the Southern Preference interim dividend distribution and the passing by the London and North-Eastern of any interim payment on the 4 per cent. First Preference and all other stocks junior thereto.

Argentine Rails have shown no change worth mention. In the Foreign Bond market the feature has been the recovery of Austrian and German Bonds from their recent weakness. Chinese Bonds have suffered a further decline. Though subject to considerable fluctuation the leading Transatlantic stocks show substantial rises on balance.

HOME INDUSTRIALS.

In the home Industrial market there has been a welcome recovery in Courtaulds (based apparently on better reports relative to the prospect of the company's American subsidiary) and in the Ordinary stock of the Cable and Wire-Company.

This latter movement appears to be rather flimsily based on the strength of newspaper headlines suggesting that the traffic index figure for June was "up," whereas in comparison with the figure for the corresponding month of 1937 it is heavily down.

The rise in Callenders Cable shares is due to the news that this company is to meet to amalgamate with Crompton Parkinson.

MINING MARKET FIRMER.

The mining share market has presented a firmer appearance during the past week, and although the best points have not been maintained price movements are generally in holders favour. Western Holdings have again been active on good development news, while Marievales have attracted a good deal of attention. Bibianis and Aristons have moved ahead. Copper shares have improved on the rise of £1 8s 9d per ton in the price of the metal. Selection Trusts have been a firm feature, while Rhokanas have appreciated.

Of diamonds, De Beers Deferreds and Preferences have moved ahead sharply.

Tin shares are better, notably, Polberro which have risen appreciably on good developments. The price of the metal rose by £3 per ton.

RUBBER SHARES FIRM.

The rise in the price of the commodity to 7 9-16d per lb. has been reflected in a rise in share values during the past week. United Sua Betongs have advanced sharply, while Anglo-Dutch and Rubber trusts have attracted a good deal of attention.

Rubber stocks showed an increase of 1,992 tons on the week.

OILS IN DEMAND.

Oil shares have been readily supported during the past week, and some appreciable gains have been registered. Canadian Eagles have moved ahead sharply, while Shells have attracted a good deal of attention. Mexican Eagles and Royal Dutch have also improved.

TEA SHARES STEADY.

Quiet conditions have prevailed in the Tea share market and values have moved narrowly.

THE NORTH EASTERN DIVIDEND.

The dividend announcement of the London and North Eastern Railway is as disappointing as that of the Southern. The First Preference stock receives no dividend as against 1 per cent. a year ago, while the 5 per cent. Redeemable Preference gets nothing as against 1½ per cent. As the total amount of these stocks outstanding is over £52,000,000 the loss to investors is severe. Dividends on the First Preference and Redeemable Preference were paid in full for the whole of 1937, and 1¾ per cent. was distributed on the 4 per cent. Second Preference stock. It is unlikely that wages can be reduced, and so a remedy must be looked for in increased freight rates. This, too, is highly improbable of achievement, but the railway unions will probably suggest that something should be done as they are holding a large quantity of stock in all the railways which are producing no dividends or are giving an infinitesimal yield.

BOOT AND SHOE FIRM.

The preliminary announcement of Lotus, Ltd., indicates a big decrease in profits. The interim dividend on Ordinary shares for the half-year ended June 30, 1938, is announced as 1½ per cent., as compared with 2½ per cent. a year ago. The directors state that the balance of profits earned in the half-year remaining, after payment of Preference dividend, is insufficient to even cover the above reduced Ordinary dividend, which will be met partly out of the profits carried from the year 1937. They add that in view of the difficulties which have been encountered during the past half-year, steps are being taken to strengthen the organisation of the company both on the manufacturing and selling sides

ALUMINIUM CONSUMPTION IN U.K.

Preliminary figures for the consumption of aluminium in the U.K. are given by the Aluminium Information Bureau as 44,000 long tons. This figure, it is stated, represents an increase of 28 per cent. compared with the consumption in the preceding year, and is more than 2½ times the quantity used in 1928. The increase of 28 per cent. in the consumption of aluminium compares with an increase of [illegible] per cent. in the consumption of copper and of nearly 19 per cent. in the consumption of tin. Lead showed a slight decrease in 1937, while the use of zinc in the U.K. increased by only 3.7 per cent.

TATA IRON-STEEL PROGRESS.

The net profit of the Tata Iron and Steel Company for the year ended March 31 last—after setting aside a sum of Rs.78,00,000 on account of depreciation on block other than collieries, a sum of Rs.10,00,000 on account of depreciation on collieries block, and a sum of Rs.40,00,000 as provision for income-tax—amounted to Rs.283,46,044, and Rs.1,94,314 was brought forward. Last year the sum of Rs.78,00,000 was set aside on account of depreciation on block other than collieries, including amount written off for discarded plant, and Rs.15,00,000 for depreciation of collieries, when the profits amounted to Rs.1,62,79,285. The directors recommend a dividend on the Ordinary at Rs.15.8.0 per share and on the Deferred at Rs.75.11.3 per share, against Rs.10 last year on the Ordinary and Rs.35.5.3 per share on the Deferred. An additional dividend has been declared on the 2nd Preference at Rs.13.2.0 per share. A sum of Rs.41,56,725 has been allocated to payment of bonus to employes, and the balance of Rs.4,98,956 is carried forward.

LINEN THREAD INTERIM.

The directors of the Linen Thread Company have decided to pay an interim dividend of 3 per cent, actual, lses tax, on the Ordinary stock. A similar interim was made at this time last year.

N.D.C. LIABILITY EFFECT.

The Manchester Dock and Warehouse Extension Company and the Manchester Ship Canal Warehousing Company, whose revenue consists mainly of rentals received from the Manchester Ship Canal Company, are reducing their Ordinary dividends because of the contingent liability for N.D.C. The Dock and Warehouse Extension Company's net revenue for the year amounted to £32,251, as compared with £32,461 for 1936-37, and the final dividend is 5s 6d per share, making for year 5½ per cent, a reduction of half per cent. The net revenue of the Ship Canal Warehousing Company was £9,424, against £9,608, and the final dividend is 6s per share, making for the year 5½ per cent, also a reduction of half per cent.

GRAIN TRADE DIFFICULTIES.

Although the reduction of the interim dividend of John Greenwood, millers, earlier in the year from 5 per cent. to 2½ per cent had prepared the way for a reduction in the final dividend, the actual announcement of the latter is an unpleasant surprise, viz., only 2½ per cent., making 5 per cent., against 12 per cent. for 1396-37. Smaller earnings and dividends in the grain trade were inevitable as a result of the recent movements in prices.

SHOE COMPANY'S SHARE BONUS.

The directors of Lilley and Skinner have decided to make a bonus issue of one 7 per cent. £1 2nd Preference share for every two Ordinary shares. The latter are privately held, and the present amount is 331,250. The last capitalised bonus issue was 25 per cent. in respect of the year 1935-36.

L.N.E.R. CHAIRMANSHIP.

MR. WM. WHITELAW TO RETIRE.

Mr. William Whitelaw has intimated to his colleagues on the Board of the London and North-Eastern Railway Company, of which he is chairman, that owing to his age and his having had to assume onerous personal responsibilities in consequence of the recent death of his elder brother he finds it impossible to continue to give adequate time to the affairs of the company, and that he desires to retire from the Board at a date convenient to them.

Mr. Whitelaw was at one time chairman of the Highland Railway, and at another of the North British Railway. On the formation of the four group railways in 1923, he became first chairman of the L.N.E.R., and has occupied the position ever since. He is in addition chairman of the Forth Bridge and Samana and Santiago Railways, and a director of the Bank of Scotland.

Mr. Whitelaw has long been prominent in Church affairs in Scotland, taking an active part in discussions in the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland. He sat as Conservative M.P. for Perth City from 1892 until 1895.

THE BANK OF IRELAND.

SIX PER CENT. FOR HALF-YEAR.

The payment of an interim dividend of six per cent., less income tax, for the half-year on and after August 2, was decided upon at a meeting of the Court of Directors of the Bank of Ireland, in Dublin, yesterday.

Mr. Henry Brodhurst Pollock (Governor), presiding, said that it had not been the practice for some years past to present accounts at their half-yearly meetings. The Board were satisfied that the profits for the six months ended June 30 last justified them in recommending an interim dividend at the rate of six per cent., less income tax.

He proposed, therefore, that an interim dividend at the rate mentioned be paid for the half-year on and after August 2.

Mr. Hugh Arthur Henry (Deputy Governor) seconded the proposition, which was carried.

The other directors present were:—Lord Glenavy, Right Hon. Andrew Jameson, Mr. Francis Cyril Martin, Mr. Thomas Shannon Martin, Mr. Henry James Millar, Sir Walter Richard Nugent, Bart.; Mr. William Claude Odlum, Mr. Braham Edward Sutton, and Mr. George Hill Tulloch.

DOLLFUSS MURDER.

CHURCH HONOURING KILLERS.

DAY OF "NATIONAL PRIDE"

SUBSTITUTED FOR MOURNING.

VIENNA, Saturday.—The fourth anniversary of the death of the Austrian Chancellor, Dr. Engelbert Dollfuss, who was shot by Nazis on July 25, 1934, is to be celebrated all over Austria as a day of "national pride" instead of national mourning.

It is understood in official circles that Herr Hess, Hitler's deputy, may announce a retrial of Planetta and his fellows who were executed for their part in the assassination.

The Catholic Church is to play its part in the celebrations by broadcasting to-morrow from Salzburg Cathedral a Requiem Mass for the 13 dead "heroes."

Dr. Dollfuss was a devout Catholic and in previous years there have been Requiem Masses for him on July 25.—Reuter.

MR. CHAMBERLAIN'S "SNEERS."

POLICY IN SPAIN

CRITICISED AT YORKSHIRE MEETING

The Prime Minister was accused of "sneering" at British seamen by Mr. Milner Gray, chairman of the Liberal Party Organisation, when addressing Yorkshire Young Liberals in Bradford to-day.

Mr. Gray said that the international situation was without precedent so far as the British Empire was concerned. For the first time a British Government not only declared that it was unable to protect its citizens carrying on their lawful occupations, but attacked them for doing so. The terrible thing was that our Government appeared to have lost all moral sense.

The policy of non-intervention in Spain was not only a tragic farce, but an excuse to prevent legitimate trading with the Spanish people supporting the Spanish Government, while permitting not only legitimate trade but the supply of arms, men, and ammunition to the rebel forces.

What was the position of the British Government in regard to the bombing of our ships by Franco and the forces assisting him. Those ships were not carrying contraband of war but supplies recognised by the non-intervention committee as legitimate.

"The Prime Minister evidently wishes these supplies to cease," said Mr. Gray. "He admits that the practice of bombing our ships is 'not nice,' but he sneers at the owners and seamen engaged in this legitimate trade because they receive higher freights and, I hope, higher wages for the inevitable extra risks they have to face.

"If the British Government think this trade should cease then the British Government wish the supporters of the Spanish Government to be starved into submission if their morale cannot be destroyed by the bombing of their open towns and the deliberate murder of their women and children."

HOLIDAY CAMP FIRE.

160 ESCAPE IN NIGHT CLOTHES.

RESCUE OF BELONGINGS.

DAMAGE ESTIMATED AT £12,000.

One hundred and sixty holidaymakers sleeping in chalets at Elmer Sands, a holiday camp near Bognor Regis (Sussex) escaped in their night clothes when a fire broke out early to-day.

The large dining room and dance hall and all the buildings of the camp with the exception of the chalets were burned to the ground.

All that remains is a mass of debris and twisted steel girders.

The damage is estimated by the Central News at £12,000.

Holidaymakers rushed across the fields and tennis courts carrying belongings when the fire was discovered, but a quantiey of luggage sent on in advance for people who were due to arrive to-day was destroyed.

An impromptu coffee stall was set up on the beach for the holidaymakers.

GAVE INNOCENT MAN A PARDON.

AFTER SIX YEARS IN JAIL.

REAL MURDERER OWNS UP.

After serving six years of a 12-year prison sentence for murder, Dimiter Yovtcheff has now been revealed as innocent through the confession of the real murderer.

Yovtcheff was one of a party of peasants who were drinking at an inn at the village of Ovtchartzi (South-West Bulgaria) in 1932, when a dispute arose.

The dispute developed into a brawl, but the local police succeeded in separating the men. On their way home, however, they accused one another of theft.

A fight ensued, and Sotir Pargoff was stabbed to death. Yovtcheff was found with a blood-stained knife on him and was arrested and charged with murder.

He denied responsibility, but the local Court sentenced him to 12 years' imprisonment.

During a bout of drunkenness recently a man living in the same village began talking about the night of the murder. What he said interested the police so much that they questioned him next day.

He then confessed that after stabbing Pargoff he put the blood-stained knife in Yovtcheff's pocket because he had a grudge against him.

The Court has now granted Yovtcheff a pardon.—Reuter.

ROBBERY AT PORTADOWN.

CASH DRAWER FOUND HALF-MILE OFF

Thieves broke into the lock-up shop of Mr. John Davison, J.P., at Ballyoran, Portadown, on the night of Thursday-Friday and stole the cash drawer containing 7s 6d, several tins of corned meat, cigarettes to the value of 8s, and several pounds of sweets.

The burglary was detected by Constable Raynolds, Portadown, while on patrol duty early on Friday morning. The empty cash drawer was later found in a field about half-a-mile from the shop.

No arrests have yet been made.

F.B.I. AND INDUSTRIAL ART.

BELFAST DIPLOMA AWARD.

Representatives of the Federation of British Industries Industrial Art Committee attended at the Royal College of Art exhibition of students' work at the Western Gallery of the Imperial Institute and adjudicated for the prizes given by the committee annually to students engaged in industrial design and commercial art.

Among the awards is:—Miss J. L. M. Auld, from Belfast College of Art, diploma this year for metal work.

"LOVERS' LANE" MYSTERY.

STILL SEARCHING FOR GEORGE BRAIN

Nine days have passed since the body of Mrs. Rose Muriel Atkins was found in Somerset Road ("Lovers' Lane"), Wimbledon, and for a week Scotland Yard have been searching for George Brain, a 13-stone Richmond van driver, whom they are anxious to interview.

For the time being inquiries are being concentrated in the Thames area where the River Police (the Thames Division of Scotland Yard) operate.

They have dragged the river at Twickenham because of a report that a grey jacket had been seen in the water.

Inquiries are also being made at warehouses on wharves and among river workers.

The police are still hoping that some member of the public will come forward with information of value.

GERMAN 'PLANE'S ATLANTIC FLIGHT

NEW YORK, Friday.—The German aeroplane Nordmeer arrived at New York to-day, having flown in 17 hours 42 minutes from Horta Azores, where it had been launched from the floating aerodrome there.—Central News.

KILKEEL HERRING FISHING.

Fishing by Kilkeel Fleet has been good this week. Several of the boats made over £100. On two occasions this week the weight of fish was so heavy in a couple of the boats that nets parted company with the boats, but were recovered later.

SEAMAN CHARGED AT NEWRY.

At a special court in Newry this morning, before Major M'Callum, R.M., Nicholas Fitzgerald, an able-bodied seaman, stated to be a native of Waterford, was charged with being drunk and disorderly in Hill Street, Newry, the previous night and with causing malicious damage to a slot machine, the property of Mr. Samuel Irwin.

District-Inspector Stratford prosecuted, and evidence of arrest was given by Constable D. Campbell, who stated that the defendant after weighing himself on the machine knocked it down, thereby damaging it.

The R.M. dealt with both charges under the Probation of Offenders Act on payment of £3 compensation to Mr. Irwin.

ON WAY TO BUKHAREST

DURING A TERRIFIC STORM.

ROUMANIAN OFFICIALS PERISH.

BUKHAREST, Saturday.—Fourteen people lost their lives when a Polish aeroplane on the regular Warsaw-Bukharest line crashed during a terrific storm last night near the Roumania—Polish frontier.

The victims, who comprised ten passengers and four crew, included a Japanese Military Attache in Warsaw and high Roumanian air officials.—Reuter.

FOR QUEEN MARIE'S FUNERAL.

The Japanese officer killed was on his way to attend the funeral of Queen Marie of Roumania.

Count Szembek, the Polish Minister for Foreign Affairs, narrowly escaped being involved in the crash, which occurred about 50 miles from Czernowice. He was to have gone by the same aeroplane, a Lockheed air liner recently bought from America for Polish Air Lines, but changed his mind at the last minute and took the train.—Central News.

DERRY CITY ASSIZES.

GRAND JURY'S RESOLUTION.

CORDIAL CONGRATULATIONS.

Lord Justice Babington, who is making his first appearance in Derry, his native city, as going Judge of Assize, was presented with a pair of white gloves at the City Assizes on Friday, emblematic of the crimeless state of the city.

Addressing the Grand Jury, of which Mr. M. S. Moore, H.M.L., was foreman, his Lordship said there were no bills to go before them, and that was a rather unusual state of affairs upon which they were entitled to congratulate themselves and the city generally. This was his first time in Derry as a going Judge of Assize, and having completed 13 years as Attorney-General in close touch with the police and suppression of crime it was very flattering to find that there was not a single criminal to go before the Grand Jury. He had had a talk with the heads of the police force, and they said that the city was in a peaceful and orderly state and that there was nothing to which he need call their attention. He was very happy to find that that was so, and he hoped it might long continue. He thought the city and its general condition had been for some years now in a fairly orderly and peaceful state.

Sir Basil M'Farland, Bart., City High Sheriff, on behalf of the Grand Jury and citizens presented his Lordship with white gloves. They were, said Sir Basil, delighted that there was an absence of crime, and hoped that would long continue. It was due to the efficiency of the police and also that they had in reserve the Special Constabulary. Above all it was due to the good sound common sense of the citizens.

His Lordship in accepting the gift associated himself with Sir Basil's remarks regarding the good sense of the citizens.

The Grand Jury passed a resolution of congratulation to his Lordship on his elevation to the bench.

LOOK BACK WITH ADMIRATION.

The resolution stated:—

"The High Sheriff and members of the Grand Jury of the County of the City of Londonderry desire to tender to your Lordship a hearty vote of welcome on your first visit to the city as Judge of Assize.

"We look back with admiration on your Lordship's brilliant and successful career as one of the leading members of the Bar and also as the holder of the responsible office of his Majesty's Attorney-General for Northern Ireland.

"We take this opportunity of congratulating you on your high judicial appointment and feel sure that your sound experience, wisdom and judgment, blended with that noble gift of mercy so characteristic in your nature will merit the confidence of the public.

"We trust that you will be long spared in health and strength to carry out your judicial duties and that we shall have the pleasure of meeting you on many future occasions as Judge of Assize for the County of the City of Londonderry, a venue with which you and the members of your family have been so long and honourably identified."

His Lordship said it was very kind of them to have passed this resolution upon his first appearance in his native city. He could assure them that he appreciated that resolution very much and the sentiments it contained. He only hoped that he might deserve the flattering tributes to himself and that in future he might not belie the opinion they had formed of him. If there was any place in the province of Ulster where his form should be thoroughly known it was in the city of Derry. It was very reassuring when one took up a position as his Majesty's Judge of Assize to know that he had behind him the approval of the representative people of the community who knew what his qualifications were.

BELFAST ROPEWORK CO.

FINAL ORDINARY DIVIDEND 3 P.C.

The directors of the Belfast Ropework Co., Ltd., at a meeting held yesterday, decided, subject to completion of audit, to recommend to the members the payment of a final dividend at the rate of 3 per cent. per annum on the Ordinary stock, less income-tax. This, together with the Interim dividend, is equivalent to 4 per cent., less income-tax for the year ended June 30, 1938.

They also authorise the payment of a dividend of 5 per cent. per annum, less income-tax, on the 5 per cent. Preference shares of the Company for the half-year ending August 31, 1938, payable on September 1, 1938.

GEN. DILL AT HOLYWOOD.

INSPECTS EAST LANCASHIRES.

General Sir John G. Dill, K.C.M.G., D.S.O., Colonel of the East Lancashire Regiment, paid a visit to the Palace Barracks, Holywood, yesterday. He travelled via Larne and Stranraer and was met at Larne by Lieut.-Colonel H. T. M'Mullan, M.C., officer commanding the First Battalion of the East Lancashire Regiment, and Colonel G. Robertson, commanding officer of the 4th/5th Battalion of the East Lancashire (T.A.) at present in camp in the barracks. They motored to Holywood and on arrival visited the orderly room and made a general inspection of the barracks and also the camp. In addition the General accompanied by the officers visited the camp which is at present at Swain's Hill, Holywood. Sir John expressed general satisfaction with all he had seen.

FAIRPLAY FOR THE STUD.

CHILDREN LOSE FAVOURITE HORSE.

Fairplay, the horse who brought joy to thousands of children from the East End of London, will not race again, and will in due course be retired to stud. He went lame in his last race, the Rosebery Stakes, and the decision that he could not stand further training was made after a consultation between Sir Frederick Hobday and Mr. H. H. Leach.

"It is, of course, very sad," said his owner, Mr. Robert Middlemas, through whose generosity poor children have for three years spent a day's outing at the "Fairplay" field at Upminster.

The scheme, which adopted the name of the horse, started with only one bus by which Mr. Middlemas began sending kiddies for a day in the country.

The "Fairplay fleet" has grown considerably since then, and it is estimated that by the end of the summer over 50,000 children will this year have been taken to Upminster.

Fairplay was a brilliantly consistent performer in cup races. Last year he won the Victoria Cup, Royal Hunt Cup, dead-heated for the Queen Elizabeth Cup, and ran second in the Newbury Spring Cup.

DARDANELLES TO MISS GOODWOOD.

The Aga Khan's three-year-old Dardanelles II. will not contest the Trundle Stakes at Goodwood next week. He is in reserve for the "Brown Band of Germany," which will be run at Munich on Sunday, July 31. C. Smirke will ride Dardanelles II., who displayed good form in a gallop to-day at Newmarket

BOYS' GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP.

Aurel Von Beckerath, of the Krefeld Club, Germany, has entered for the Boys' Amateur Golf Championship, which is to take place at Moor Park, London, in the last week in August. He is champion of the Krefeld Club, and holds the record of 71 for the course.

Another interesting entrant is Tom Fernie, jun., son of Tom Fernie, professional to the Royal Lytham and St. Anne's Club. Young Fernie's grandfather won the Open Golf Championship in 1883, and his father won the Scottish Professional Championship four times.

BYGONE ST. LEGERS.

ROMANTIC HAPPENINGS.

WHEN ROBERT THE DEVIL WON.

In the year 1872 the Derby was won by a horse called Cremorne and the St. Leger by a horse called Wenlock, and the former was recognised as one of the most beautiful animals which ever inserted his name on the roll of the Derby winners.

The hero of the public that year, however, was beyond doubt Prince Charlie, who was known far and wide as the "King of the T.Y.C." Six furlongs was really Prince Charlie's best distance and a mile the very limit of his tether, yet he managed not only to win the Two Thousand Guineas, but actually ran second for the St. Leger.

The reason that he was able to perform this feat was, of course, the possession of super-speed. So superior was his speed to that of the vast majority of his contemporaries that he was only cantering while they were galloping, and most of them were unable to stretch him.

EXCHANGED FOR CART FOAL.

Wenlock, who beat Prince Charlie at Doncaster, was the sire of Deadlock. This mare was sold by Lord Alington to Capt. Machell for £20 and £1 back for luck, and was afterwards lost sight of.

When the Wenlocks began to win Capt. Machell made a search for Deadlock, and by an extraordinary piece of good fortune found her being driven in a farmer's cart. He actually got her back by giving a cart foal in exchange for her. She was sent to Isonomy, and her second (or it may have been her third) foal was Isinglass, who won the Triple Crown.

One of the most extraordinary scenes of excitement ever witnessed at Doncaster was when in the year following, Marie Stuart and Doncaster, both the property of Mr. James Merry, but running on their merits, raced home locked together, with the filly winning by a head.

Marie Stuart was ridden by Tom Osborne and Doncaster by Fred Webb, who had won the Derby on him. Fred Webb in after years was a successful trainer, but Tom Osborne went to the bad and died in great poverty in New York.

Four years later Lord Falmouth ran first and second with Silvio (who had won the Derby) and Lady Golightly, the colt, with Fred Archer up, being an easy winner. Third that year was Lord Bradford's Manoeuvre. Mated some years later with Wisdom, Manoeuvre gave birth to Sir Hugo, who won for Lord Bradford his first and only Derby under sensational circumstances.

FIRST AND SECOND AGAIN.

Curiously enough, Lord Falmouth again ran first and second in the following year with Jeannette and Childeric, with Master Kildare third. Two years later, with Archer up, Master Kildare won one of the most sensational races ever run. This was the City and Suburban of 1880, in which he beat Leoville by the length of a cigar after it had seemed impossible that he could get up.

Many of the best judges among the veterans declared that this was the finest finish Archer ever rode. Others hold, on the other hand, that his finest finish was on Master Kildare's son Melton, when he beat Paradox a head for the Derby.

It is rather romantic that the long 'un should have ridden two such wonderful races on father and son.

Possibly the wettest St. Leger day ever known was that on which Robert the Devil won. From all accounts Sansovino's Derby day must have been mere child's play to it, and that was bad enough in all conscience. The water flowed across the running track in rivers, and everybody present, horses and men alike, were nearly drowned.

"Does your horse jump water?" Charlie Blanton, trainer of Robert the Devil, asked Bob Peck, trainer of Bend Or, when they met in the paddock. Apparently Bend Or did not, for he was never in the race, and was ignominiously beaten.

ARCHER'S 40-1 WINNER.

One of the most sensational victories of all time was that of Dutch Oven, who started at 40-1—a truly wonderful price to be laid against a horse ridden by Fred Archer.

Dutch Oven had, however, been badly beaten at York shortly before, so badly, indeed, that Fred Archer, thinking that she would not run at Doncaster, had provisionally engaged himself to ride the favourite, Geheimniss.

Lord Falmouth, however, claimed Archer to ride Dutch Oven, and with Geheimniss, a rank non-stayer, Dutch Oven kept plugging along, and finally ran him out of it.

Lord Rodney owned Kilwarlin, who won the St. Leger in 1887, after being left the best part of a furlong. The descendant of the famous admiral also won a big stake when Humewood won the Cesarewitch in the same year, yet he did not last long on the Turf.

This was the fate of a number of wealthy young noblemen and gentlemen who patronised the Sport of Kings under the aegis of the late Captain Machell.

THE HOTTEST FAVOURITE.

Seabreeze, who won for the late Lord Calthorpe in the year after Kilwarlin, was a good mare, and scored very easily. A queer thing about Lord Calthorpe is that when he died his name was put in the forfeit list for a paltry sum.

One of the hottest St. Leger favourites was Galtee More, who started at 10-1 on. Really nothing in the race appeared to be "mapped" except the favourite, and yet he only got home by three-parts of a length and a neck from Chelandry and the Yankee horse, St. Cloud II.

Galtee More was immeasurably superior to either of these animals, but the race was run at such a funereal crawl that the crack nearly got whacked for speed when they began to race about a quarter of a mile from home.
